Is All History "Bunk"?

"Fight cancer with facts" is the scientific slogan of this most useful anti-cancer week.

The most important cancer fact is this: If cancer could be diagnosed, discovered and treated early, one-third of all deaths from cancer could be prevented.

The late Dr. Murphy of Chicago told of a butcher with a slight growth on his thumb. It could have been removed and the trouble ended. It was neglected, and the cancer growth, traveling unseen, appeared in the man's armpit. When he told this writer about it Dr. Murphy had finished cutting out half the unfortunate man's shoulder, removing his arm, etc., and with only doubtful hope of cure.

DO NOT NEGLECT ANY STRANGE GROWTH on the surface or below the surface. Nineteen times out of twenty it means nothing serious, 99 times in 100 perhaps, but the 100th time it may mean death. The Red Cross, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. will distribute printed information.

The Catholic Church throughout the country is co-operating fully in the spread of saving knowledge. In the city of New York, where this writer happens to be at the moment, every Catholic Church, from Staten Island to Westchester County, yesterday preached warning and information about cancer from the pulpit.

If you want information, ask the Mayor of your city where it may be had. Avoid quacks. There is NO cancer cure, and at a certain stage cancer is beyond help. But in early stages the knife may remove the danger absolutely. Radium has helped and cured when cancer is near the surface and can be reached by the penetrating rays.

Consult also the health officer of your city.

Cancer is the most hideous enemy of mankind, killing by torture. It will be conquered eventually. It is conqueror now—unless taken in time.

To be seen, climb up on a high place. To be heard, make yourself somebody, then people will listen.

Charlie Chaplin knows it and has played his most successful joke on solemn respectabilities.

He is a talented young English Jew, very radical in his views, and sympathizes with I. W. W. citizens put in jail for talking. If he were ONLY a talented young English Jew, friendly to the I. W. W., little would be heard of him, but he is also Charlie Chaplin, earning a million dollars a year, and THAT makes him respectable.

He writes his opinions, sobs his sympathy for an I. W. W. sent to jail for twenty years, and conservative newspaper owners, from Victor Lawson up and down, print all he says.

Thus, in a comic way, the I. W. W. and other radicalism gets a respectable hearing on the front pages of newspapers that little dreamed they would live to see THAT happen.

A new series of earthquakes starts in South America. There will be changes in the earth's level. Perhaps new volcanoes spouting. South America is to have troubles—not excessively serious, let us hope, such as this North America has had, and Europe and Asia long ago.

South America is the young baby continent and, like all infants, is bound to go through a period of colic and upheaval. South America lay sleeping below the bosom of our mother, the ocean, for millions of years after North America and other continents had risen into the sunlight and into crawling life.

In this proud nation there are, over twenty-one years of age and able to vote (thinking is another matter), 27,661,850 men and 25,759,983 women, in all 54,421,833 American voters.

A great majority of them do not own their own homes, and a greater majority do not know what it is all about when they go to vote. They are labelled Democrats or Republicans and vote according to the label, then wait to see what happens.

The city of Des Moines, be it said to Iowa's honor, stands first in the nation as a city of independent citizens—51.1 per cent. owning the houses they live in. In proud Manhattan, heart of the world's greatest city, 2 in 100 own their homes—landlords own the rest. Michigan has a city that ranks second, Grand Rapids, with 50.1 per cent of home owners.

"History," says Henry Ford, "is bunk." This will startle the ghosts of Gibbon, Michelet, Froude, Suckle, Parton and others who thought they were doing useful work.

"Learn to read and write, then work out your own ideas, mix with people, get experience," says the learned adviser of Detroit. Perhaps H. G. Wells will answer Mr. Ford's announcement, others will regret time wasted in youth.

It may be suggested, diffidently, that some have found inspiration and good ideas "mixing" with people of the past.

Many a little boy has felt his chest swell reading of Horatius fighting at the bridge, diving all armed into the Tiber.

Cornelia, preferring her children to fancy jewelry, has comforted young mothers with no other jewelry: William Tell—whether his legend be true or "bunk," has

FORCED BY SATURDAY INCIDENT

Athletic Association May Take Action Following Demonstration After Centre Game

Harvard is planning to bar the general public from future football games at the Stadium as a result of the near riot that occurred Saturday after the Crimson eleven had been defeated by Centre College.

The Harvard Athletic Association charges that persons not affiliated in any way with Harvard have made themselves very obnoxious at the football games at the Stadium this year. The climax was reached at the Centre game. When the contest ended, wild crowds surged around the Harvard players and attempted to attack them.

Buell and Graw, two of the Harvard regulars, were surrounded by a portion of the crowd. Just as they were about to be attacked, Mr. R. (Tacks) Hardwick, former Crimson star, dashed into the centre of the crowd and dispersed it.

Mhe Harvard players were forced virtually to fight their way to the locker building. Their way at times was blocked by an angry, howling crowd which hurled profanity and other improper epithets at the defeated athletes.

Meanwhile "Bo" McMillin and the triumphant Centre College players were being carried from the field on the shoulders of an admiring crowd.

The attack on the Harvard players Saturday was merely one of many demonstrations that have been made against Coach Fisher's men this year.

In several of the games previous to the clash with Centre, Harvard players have been hooed and hissed on the slightest provocation. When a penalty has been inflicted on an opposing team, many of the spectators have considered this sufficient reason for displaying their dislike of Harvard.

Five years ago the Harvard football games were witnessed chiefly by a so-called college crowd. But as football has grown the general public has formed the narrow minded with as much enthusiasm as it has displayed toward baseball.

Harvard men contend that this has attracted many undesirable persons to the games at the Stadium. It is felt in some quarters that there are enough men affiliated with Harvard to give the Crimson team sufficient financial support without seeking any outside aid.

TWO DEAD, ONE DYING, IN NEW JERSEY TRAGEDY

Elizabeth, N. J., NOct. 31.—Martin Smith a teacher in a West New York school, and his five-year-old daughter are dead and Mrs. Smith is in a serious condition in a hospital, as the result of a shooting early today in their home in an isolated section near Springfield. Police Chief Rubin of Springfield expressed the opinion that Smith wounded his wife and killed his daughter and then turned his weapon upon himself.

CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND WILL FEED THOUSANDS

The Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, which provides free food for thousands of impoverished families at Yuletide, was opened today for the eighth consecutive season. With a gift of $1,000, the Boston American heads the list of contributors. We earnestly hope readers will respond generously to the appeal for assistance.

The need is greater this year than at any time since the fund started. Thousands of men, women and children who have never known want are impoverished now because of widespread unemployment and illness. The unemployment situation in the United States has brought untold suffering in all sections this year. Greater Boston has its full share of the 5,000,000 more unemployed men of this country. Hundreds of families in Greater Boston are barely existing on account of inability of breadwinners to obtain work. Many are at the verge of despair.

MANY NEAR STARVATION.

There are a large number of persons in this city and vicinity who will experience the saddest Christ-

M. J. SULLIVAN OF SALEM UNDER ARREST

Boxing Promoter Accused of Embezzling Taxes Due Government on Athletic Contests

Michael J. Sullivan, boxing promoter, and James T. Boyle, both of Salem, were arrested by United States Marshal today and arraigned before Commissioner Hayes, charged with diverting to their own use and embezzling of $6,344.55, due to the government as taxes on admissions to boxing contest given at the Commonwealth Athletic and the Navahun Athletic clubs of Salem last month.

Commissioner Hayes held them in $2,000 bail each for hearing November 15. They furnished the bail.

On August 26, Sullivan filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, in which he gave his occupation as boxing promoter, and his liabilities as $44,662.78, about $9,000 of which were taxes, due the government. He said then he had no assets.

DAUGHTER'S WRIT ON CREMATION CONTINUED

Mrs. Grace G. Kanaly of Brookline was today granted a continuance of the injunction restraining her father, Patrick J. Keenan of Washington, from removing the body of her mother from Mt. Auburn Cemetery and cremating it. Judge Sanderson, in the equity motion session of Superior Court, made the ruling. He at the same time ordered that pleadings be completed forthwith and the case put on the merit list which means that it may be heard this week.

GIRL DYING IN AUTO CRASH

Another Badly Hurt as Machines Collide On Rutherford Avenue

Two girls were seriously injured, one of them probably fatally, today when the car in which they were riding on Austin street, Charlestown, crashed into a machine at Rutherford avenue.

The dying girl is Selma Herman, 16 years old, of No. 14 Harris Road, Medford. She is at the Relief Station with a fracture of the base of the skull and internal injuries.

The other is Bertha Herman, 17 years old, of No. 14 Washington street, Medford, who has a lacerated scalp wound and cuts and bruises over the upper part of her body.

The two girls were passengers in a machine owned by Andrew Shapiro of Bird street, Dorchester, and driven by Charles Shapiro of the same address. The car was moving along Rutherford avenue at a rapid pace when the other machine operated by Samuel Brody, of Holmstead street, Dorchester, dashed out from Austin street.

Both drivers attempted to avoid the collision, but the cars were going too swiftly.

In the crash the two girls were thrown out against the curb. Miss Welma Herman alighting on her head and shoulders.

Both were placed in a passing automobile and hurried to the hospital, where the name of Miss Selma was placed on the danger list, and the doctors declared there was little hope for her recovery.

Neither was badly hurt, although Brody sustained painful cuts and bruises.

Both machines were wrecked

Bandits Make Attack on Springfield Garage and One Victim May Die

Springfield, Oct. 31.—Six auto bandits raided the Charter Oak garage on Water street shortly after noon today, wounded the proprietor, probably fatally, shot one of the attendants through both legs and beat four others.

They were driven off empty-handed after a pitched battle, leaving one of their number, Pasquale Mendaro, in the hands of the embattled garage men.

THE CASUALTIES:

Manard Hart, proprietor of the garage; shot through both lungs, and not expected to live.

Peter Rafferty, or No. 19 Elton street, an attendant; shot through both legs.

May Hart, sister of the proprietor, was in the garage when the robbers came into the establishment from a big red touring car, their guns blazing and their shouts terrifying the entire neighborhood. She escaped notice by dropping under a desk and later crawling to a telephone and called the police.

Mendaro, the man who was left behind when the bandits backed out of the garage, was immediately captured by those of the garage men still on their feet and was given a severe

VICTIMS IN TRAGEDY ARE NEAR DEATH

Althea Knight of Malden Wounded by Sweetheart in Father's Store

Miss Althea Knight, twenty-two years old, cashier for her father, Oscar Knight, a grocer at No. 113 Ferry street, Malden, was shot and probably fatally wounded today by George A. Dunham, Jr., twenty-five years old, of No. 9 Converse avenue, Malden, who then turned his revolver on himself.

Both are at the Malden Hospital, where it was said there is little chance of their recovery.

In talking to the door after being shot Miss Knight's dress came in contact with a lighted gas heater and caught fire. In addition to her other injuries, she was severely burned about the legs and lower body before the flames could be extinguished.

Dunham and Miss Knight have been sweethearts for some time, and among their friends were generally understood to have been engaged.

QUARRELLED AT GAME.

That the current of true love has not been running smoothly of late was known to Miss Knight's family. Saturday she and Dunham went to a football game between Malden and Everett high schools.

At the game some difference arose between them and although Miss Knight mentioned it at home Saturlay night she did not reveal its nature.

Shortly before 11 o'clock today Dunham, who has been out of work for some weeks since losing his job as salesman for the S. S. Pierce Grocery Company, drove his automobile up to the Knight store and entered the place.

PLEADED WITH GIRL.

Customers noticed Dunham go to the cage and begin talking to the girl. George McLeod, No. 20 Franklin street, Malden, watched them while waiting for an order to be wrapped up. He says that Dunham appeared to be pleading about something which the girl was refusing.

McLeod left the store to go to the fruit shop adjoining, when he heard two shots. Running back into the grocery, he was in time to see Dunham place the muzzle of the revolver against his head and fire two more shots.

Accompanied by Knight and another customer McLeod ran to the side of the girl, who had slipped from her high stool and was jammed between the legs of the stool and the wall of the cage. Her body was lying upon the burning heater and her dress was blazing fiercely when McLeod reached her side.

STAMPED OUT FLAMES.

The man dragged her out of the flames. It was then seen that she was bleeding from a bullet hole just back of the left ear and that another bullet had struck her in the body.

Dunham, who was sprawled out on the floor of the shop in front of the cage, was apparently dead.

The police were notified, while Knight and McLeod attempted to administer first aid to the dying girl.

An ambulance from the Malden Hospital arrived in a few minutes and they were rushed to the hospital.

Herrick Gets Blackhand Letter

By Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 31.—Ambassador Herrick today received a "Black Hand" letter protesting against the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti for murder in Massachusetts.

A large, well-drawn hand, filled in with ink, occupied most of the sheet. At the upper left hand corner a skull and cross bones had been outlined, with the word "Justice" underneath, while in the right hand corner a long dagger was depicted. The letter had been posted at Grenoble.

Even Patrick Henry, Washington crossing the Delaware, Charlotte Corday walking unafraid to the guillotine, Nathan Hale, sorry he could die for his country only once. Nelson putting the glass to his blind eye that he might not see the order to stop fighting, Mirabeau in his great speech in the handball court, Rouget De Lisle writing the "Marseillaise," D'Auvergne yelling warning to his sleeping comrades while the English tried vainly to choke his voice with their spears, Napoleon leading his men at the Bridge of Lodi, Luther with his "God help me, I can no other," at Worms; Croesus crying out above the flames, "Oh, Solon! Solon!" The Spartan boy allowing the fox to eat his vitals, John Brown at Harper's Ferry, MacSwiney dying of hunger in prison, Alexander cutting the knot with his sword, or sending his spearmen against the elephant, Milton, blind and working; Cleopatra, stung for her follies; Marcus Aurelius, painfully virtuous, when he might have had more fun than Nero—and many similar instances of historical "bunk" have aroused useful thought not found in cranking a Ford car or hammering on one wheel, eight hours, for $6.

LLOYD GEORGE ATTACKED IN COMMONS

Unionist Leader Moves Vote of Censure; Defeat Is Looked For.

By International News Service

London, Oct. 31.—Charging that the Irish Peace Conference "has been hopeless from the start," Colonel John Gretton, a Coalition unionist, this afternoon in the House of Commons moved a vote of censure against Premier Lloyd George in the Cabinet's Irish policy.

"The government is seeking a pretext to break off the conference," Colonel Gretton declared.

The Coalition Unionist speaker was greeted with ironical cheers as he began to speak. It was generally admitted throughout the house that the resolution was doomed and that the Lloyd George government will receive a big majority.

Contradicting an earlier report that he would definitely sail for the United States on Saturday, Premier Lloyd George this afternoon told intimate friends he had "about given up the idea of sailing on the Aquitania on Saturday."

He said, however, he believed he would be able to take the next boat. The Premier was confident that a settlement of the Irish problem would be reached along two lines.

1—The Sinn Fein would renounce the sovereignty of King George.

HONEST AND PROVES IT BY PAYING $5 LOAN

Last week Chief Deputy United States Marshal James A. Tighe passed out a $5 bill to Alex Dugot, who had just been fined $10 as a liquor complaint. Dudwick had only 20 cents to pay his way to Springfield. "I've lent money to buddies like Tighe, "and everyone promised to return it. Not one ever did." Dudwick promised, none the less, and Tighe would get his $5 Monday. Today Tighe found a special delivery letter on his desk and in it was $5.

COOLIDGE ASKS LEGION TO HELP CUT EXPENSE

By International News Service.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31.—The awakening of a national spirit was the great reward of the United States in the World War and this spirit must be carried on, Vice-President Coolidge said today in an address at the opening of the American Legion convention.

"If men in civil life in these days would put their thought and effort into the success of the people of the whole country, as in military life you put your thought and effort in time of war into the success of the whole army, the victories of peace would follow as surely as did the victories of war," the Vice-President said.

"Government and industry, locality and society, all need the national optimism you so proudly achieved. It is time in every family in our land for men in every relationship to stop trying to get the better of each other and begin trying to get ahead together.

"If it be well for America to have a strong national spirit, it must be well for others to cherish the same spirit. The war did not break this spirit in any free country. It strengthened it, strengthened it for the glory of all. America first, is not selfishness, it is the righteous demand for strength to serve. And America has been dedicated to an unselfish service.

WARNING TO LEGION.

"It will not be, then, in diminishing but in enlarging the national spirit, that true progress will be found. There can be no society without a home, no civilization without citizenship."

The Vice-President warned the legionaires that "in resisting all attacks upon our liberty you will always remember that the sole warranty of liberty is obedience to law under the forms of ordered government.

"It is the most cherished ambition of President Harding that there may be no veteran or dependant anywhere within our country entitled by law to relief who shall not be able, promptly and adequately, to secure it," said Mr. Coolidge. "He will never sacrifice you for his own welfare. He will sacrifice himself for your welfare."

The Vice-President said the veterans' bureau's yearly expenditures are running at the rate of about $411,000,000, which is more than one-half the entire expense of the government before the war. Urging that the legionaires lend their aid to the program for economy, Mr. Coolidge Vice-President pointed out that the current cost of previous and successive wars are four and five-sixths billions, while the cost of the nation's peace activities is one and one-sixth billion.

HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE.

At noon a memorial service was held for the late Frederick W. Galbraith, National Commander, who lost his life at Indianapolis June 8.

The afternoon was devoted to addresses by General Baron Jacques, General Diaz and Major-General Lejeune. Greetings were also extended by the official representatives of the American Federation of Labor, Grand Army of the Republic, United Confederate Veterans, Spanish American War Veterans, British Legion and the Great War Veterans of Canada.

Tonight Admiral Beatty and Admiral Coontz will address the legionaires, although there are many matters of important business to be threshed out in the convention before election of officers and the selection of the next convention city on Wednesday, the final day. A spirited contest was already in progress today between New Orleans and San Francisco for the 1922 meeting.

Move to Make Logan Commander of Legion

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31.—All three of New England delegations to the third annual national convention of the American Legion arrived in this city this morning.

The most important business for the Yankees today, after finding their billets, will be the caucus to consider candidates for national offices and resolutions.

The caucus will be held tonight. There is only avowed candidate from Massachusetts for a national place and that is Raymond O. Brackett of Marblehead. He wants to be a vice-commander. His campaign manager, Joseph J. Heffernan of South End Post of Boston who missed the train at Montreal, is not due to reach this city until this afternoon and, for that reason principally, the Brackett boom is somewhat deflated.

While the American Legion is forbidden by its constitution to take a partisan interest in politics there is nothing which prohibits an expression by members in a buddy who is being considered by non-partisan organizations for political honors.

One of the most popular men in the Massachusetts delegation is Captain William J. McGuinness of Lawrence. He has received word from home that the Citizens' Association of the Mill City has been thinking of him as a candidate for Mayor and that at a meeting Monday night, his availability will be given serious consideration.

There is some talk about trying to induce General Edward L. Logan of Boston and Colonel John F. J. Herbert of Worcester to enter the race for nation Legion head. Herbert did not warm up to the suggestion when it was broached to him on the train.

Logan did not travel with the delegations but came along quietly with Mrs. Logan. He was in the field at the Minneapolis convention two years ago and was running along in good style until he made a surprising attack upon the integrity of the New York delegation when his chances quickly faded and he withdrew from the contest.

HANS TAUSCHER CHARGES ARE DROPPED

of Tauscher to this country. It was stated unofficially that there is no necessity for a ruling of this kind from the Attorney-General.

The American Legion officials are today considering what action the organization shall take upon the application filed by Tauscher, for permission to come back to this country and take out citizenship papers.

The application, which has been received by the State Department, has been referred officially to the Department of Justice for an opinion as to the legality of such a step.

According to official advices from Washington, it was announced at the Department of Justice today.

Daugherty now has before him a letter from Secretary of State Hughes asking the advice of the Department of Justice relative to the admission Berlin Tauscher wishes to become an American citizen as an example to his countrymen of the solution of their country's difficulties through maintaining friendly relations with the United States. The indictment in San Francisco is still pending.

Tauscher first came into the limelight during the war when he was indicted and tried and acquitted on a charge of complicity with Captain Boy-Ed and Von Papen and Horst Von Der Goltz, in a plot to blow up the Welland Canal.

Later he was intimately connected with the plots of Von Papen and Boy-Ed and others in the anxious days that preceded the entry of the United States into the war against Germany.

The indictment in California charged him with being connected with a plot to ship arms and ammunition to rebels in India.

He is alleged to have shown great friendliness for this country after his arrival in Germany, and to have used his influence in behalf of American prisoners of war.

The attitude of Tauscher and Mme. Gadski, his wife, toward the allied cause during the war was such that it attracted the attention of the American Legion and just recently a flood of protest was voiced in New York against the appearance of the singer in a series of public concerts. She was scheduled to appear at Carnegie Hall.

The American Defence Society, the American Legion and other patriotic societies filed vigorous protests against this plan.

They based their objections, it was stated, upon stories current in 1916 and 1917 regarding the singer's attitude toward the United States. It was at that time declared, although denied by her, that she gave a dinner at her New York residence on New Year's eve, 1915, at which Otto Goritz, a German singer, sang a parody, making fun of the sinking of the Lusitania.

LEGION TAKES 'AUCTION' IDEA FROM GARRISON

Urbain J. Ledoux, "Mr. Zero," champion of the unemployed, today attacked the methods of the District Employment Committee in Washington as "cold, unsympathetic and unChristian."

Ledoux also made a confession on his return to this city from the capital. He admitted that he borrowed his idea of selling jobless men from a public auction "block" on Boston Common from William Lloyd Garrison.

"I didn't initiate the public auction idea," said Ledoux. "Bostonians appeared to have forgotten that Garrison sold slaves on Boston Common in the old days and I had to go to New York to learn about it."

TO SPEAK AT HARVARD.

Ledoux came to Boston to speak tonight before the students' Liberal Club at Harvard. He visited his "Church of the Unemployed" on Howard street, and was overjoyed to find how the work had developed there, he said.

"I intend to return to Washington to continue my duties there," he said. "It is a pleasure to visit Boston. I prefer to discuss Boston than New York or Washington. It has seen the light. Its Christian consciousness has been aroused. It has the proper attitude toward one's neighbors, something that other cities should develop at once.

"But, please do not brand me as a carp or critic. My mission is constructive. I wish to build and not to tear down. But I must give Boston its due. The best evidence that its public conscience has been aroused relative to the unemployed was given in the splendid interest shown by Mayor Peters, who made a very deep impression at the conference in Washington.

READ "HIGHEST LAW."

"I had the press and the people with me at the capital, but the police had their instructions to raise obstacles. I didn't blame them. They had to do as they were told. When I advertised an auction at our "Stepping Stone" on Pennsylvania avenue, not from the Capitol, a captain came with two warrants, one to forbid auctioning men and another prohibiting auctioning their services.

"But I read the highest law on that problem from the Bible. I announced that I would sell Iron Jacks for $1 and that I would throw in the services of an overseas veteran, but that the purchaser must guarantee him $18 a week.

"We did not get the slightest help from the District Employment Committee. The committee has the wrong slant of things. It is in a rut. It lacks sympathy and vision. It refuses to permit contributions through the mails. The Volunteers of America, and other organizations pooled their facilities and influence with ours, but not the District Employment Committee.

BETTER CHANCE FOR GIRLS HERE, SAYS BEAUTY

New York, Oct. 31.—"A girl has a 100 per cent better chance in America than in any other country in the world," declared Cecelia Bevan, said to be the most beautiful girl in England, when seen today at the apartment of her sorrowly less comely sister, Edna May, at No. 54 Butler place, Brooklyn.

The speaker has only just arrived in New York on the liner Saxonia from her native country, but her sister has been here since last March, and is as enthusiastic about the United States as "the land of golden opportunity" as is Cecelia.

"From now on there will be no more England for us," said Edna May, while Cecelia nodded her shapely head in vigorous approval. "We are to be American citizens forever and ever."

Cecelia has entered many beauty contests conducted by English newspapers, and almost invariably carried off first honors.

Miss Edna May Bevan came to New York to meet any marry her fiance, she told reporters, but they afterwards "agreed to disagree" and she took a position with a Fifth avenue establishment of which she is now general manager.

She, too, has been a prominent entrant in a number of English beauty contests.

LYNN WOMAN IN SAN FRANCISCO VANISHES

By International News Service

San Francisco, Oct. 31.—Police, in response to appeals from Lloyd Gavel, today endeavored to solve the mystery of the disappearance of his pretty wife, Grace, 32 years old, who two days after their arrival here from Lynn, Mass., vanished without leaving a trace.

Mrs. Gavel left her hotel, requesting the hotel clerk to inform her husband she was in a park close by. Gavel, 26 minutes later, searched the park but failed to find her. Mrs. Gavel carried no purse and according to her husband had no friends or acquaintances in this city.

Mrs. Cavel is the daughter of a wealthy Providence contractor, and married Lloyd Gavel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Gavel, No. 44 Saratoga street, Lynn, two years ago. The marriage was performed in Providence.

The Gavels said today that their son and daughter-in-law had not lived in Lynn for at least a year, and that they must have gone to San Francisco from some other city. After their marriage they lived for a time in Boston and Beverly.

Young Mrs. Gavel was prominent in war work in New York before her marriage and it was in this work that she met her husband, who was in the Merchant Marine. Her parents-in-law considered her very happy with their son.

According to the garage employes, the bandits opened fire without any warning or without the usual victims time to obey the "Hands up" injunction as they drew up at the door and leaped out.

It is assumed from their number that they intended to make off with several automobiles as well as rifle the cash register.

The proprietor Hart and his loyal employes gave spirited opposition, using knives, clubs, pieces of iron and guns in the attempt to beat off the attack.

Miss Hart, whose heroism in calling the police undoubtedly saved the others to keep up the fight, promptly collapsed as the beaten robbers vanished in a trail of dust.

Mondaro, the man arrested, has so far refused to talk, according to the police. It is stated, however, that he has been sought for months as a witness in connection with a bribery case in West Springfield, growing out of the bootlegging activities of himself and a "gang."

The five who escaped are considered among the most dangerous criminals in western Massachusetts.

TYPHUS ON SHIP HELD HERE AT QUARANTINE

Captain of Norwegian Vessel Just Reaching Port, Is Victim of Dreaded Disease

Fearing that the dread typhus might break out among members of the crew, the health authorities of the port of Boston today held at Quarantine the Norwegian steamship Snar, which arrived from Guantanamo and Santiago with a load of sugar.

The Snar will be detained at quarantine for a week as a precaution. Captain Olsen was stricken at sea, and his condition became so serious that the Snar touched at Norfolk. The ship sailed before the other members of the crew learned of the diagnosis of their skipper's illness.

The Norfolk authorities notified the health officials of the port of Boston that Captain Olsen was suffering from typhus fever, and every precaution has been taken by the local authorities to prevent a spread of the malady.

The Snar is being fumigated and the other members of her crew are being subjected to sanitary baths and their clothing will be steamed. They will be under observation until Saturday at least to guard against any possibility of the fever spreading among them.

Quarantine is six miles from the city. The health officials report that there is no danger of contagion here. Typhus is spread by infected "cooties."

NURSE SUED FOR STEALING LOVE OF BLIND INVENTOR NOW DEAD

$25,000 SOUGHT BY WIDOW

Worcester, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Ella N. Aitchison, widow of the late George T. Aitchison, widely known through Massachusetts as an inventor, has brought suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Eleanor G. Maynard, a Worcester nurse, charging her with alienation of the late inventor's affections.

During the last ten years of his life Aitchison, who was ninety-two years old at the time of his death, was an invalid, stone blind. Mrs. Maynard served as a nurse during all of this period, while for several years prior to his death in April, 1920, Mrs. Aitchison and he had been separated.

POST-NUPTIAL SUIT.

The estate left by Aitchison is valued at over $75,000. The exact manner of the division of this is not known, but it is believed that Mrs. Aitchison's share was not as large as she expected.

Last Fall she brought suit to have a post-nuptial agreement between herself and her husband set aside. This agreement was never made public, but it is known that it had to do with a renunciation of some property rights in Aitchison's estate by Mrs. Aitchison.

During the hearing of this case, which is still pending before Master Charles B. Rugg, Mrs. Aitchison's attorney introduced evidence relating to the conduct of the aged inventor and Mrs. Maynard.

BEEN TO EMBRACE.

Witnesses swore that they had often seen Aitchison address her in terms of endearment, and had seen kisses and embraces pass between the two. This evidence, it is understood, will form an integral part of the evidence in the alienation suit.

Mrs. Aitchison declared in her petition that Mrs. Maynard had ingratiated herself in the old man's affections and had deprived his wife of his society and love.

The inventor's widow is represented by Attorney Berenson of Boston.

YOUNG WIFE ACCUSED IN TRAGIC LOVE TRYST

Mrs. Frances E. Bird, who has been arrested charged with shooting Arthur C. Bates. It is alleged that Bates and Mrs. Bird planned to elope and met in the woods near Ash street, Brockton. A quarrel ensued, the police allege, and the girl shot Bates. He is dying.

BROCKTON LOVE ROW VICTIM IS RECOVERING

Mystery Increases in Shooting for Which Young Matron Is Held in $10,000.

Brockton, Oct. 31.—Mystery increased today in the shooting of Arthur C. Bates, local business man, who from his cot in Brockton Hospital has accused Mrs Francis E. Bird, a pretty young matron, of murderous assault.

The first development was the discovery that police were cautiously investigating the possibility that a third party, not yet named, fired the shot.

The second was the continued failure of the authorities to find the revolver with which they allege Mrs. Bird wounded Bates while the two were talking together in a clump of trees off Ash street.

Mrs. Bird was arraigned today and held in $10,000 until November 3. Friends reported that she would maintain her innocence and fight the case. Bates is showing some slight improvement and his chances of recovery are now good.

Police at first had the theory that Mrs. Bird wounded Bates after a quarrel at their trysting place off Ash street just as she was about to elope with him.

This theory has not been abandoned and police still believe that Mrs. Bird and the bachelor business man planned to run away.

Bates, according to the authorities, told them that Mrs. Bird fired five shots at him, point-blank. He was hit only once.

Mrs. Bird is the wife of Clifton E. Bird. She is twenty-six years old. Bates is about the same age.

The details of the shooting are shrouded in mystery. Bates was found wounded in a stretch of woods near Ash street, not a great distance from the Bird residence. Near the place where his body was lying were discovered two packed bags filled with clothes said to belong to the accused woman.

Police believe that the two had met in the woods and were preparing to steal away together when a quarrel of some sort arose between them and Mrs. Bird drew her revolver. When arrested, however, Mrs. Bird did not have any weapon in her possession, nor can any gun be found in the woods in the neighborhood of the spot where the shooting occurred.

SUSPECT PLOT TO ASSASSINATE VENIZELOS

Special Guard Provided for Ex-Premier of Greece During American Trip

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece is spending west today, guarded by a special squad of secret service men, following apparently authoritative reports of a plot to assassinate the statesman. Venizelos is en route to California.

Details of the plot, because of its extreme gravity, have been kept secret. It is known, however, that the Venizelos party has been apprehensive of a mysterious danger ever since it landed in New York last week. Venizelos, in Chicago, has appeared to shun open contact with the enthusiastic crowds, which sought to follow him.

It is the theory of investigators that the assassination conspiracy was designed by Greek royalists, who foresee in Venizelos's visit to the United States, a secret financial campaign for funds with which to overthrow King Constantine and restore the republican regime.

SENATE WILL COME TO AID OF VETERANS

Legislation to Halt Mistreatment of Disabled to Follow Disclosures by Committee

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Surprised by the disclosures which came to their desks today in the report of the special committee which has just completed an investigation of the government's treatment of sick and disabled World War veterans, members of the Senate were in a mood today to give consideration to proposals for remedial legislation.

The investigating committee, headed by Senator Sutherland, Republican, of West Virginia, and operating under a resolution sponsored by Senator Walsh, eDmocrat, of Massachusetts, announced that a bill with provisions designed to furnish practical relief in line with its specific recommendations, would be introduced in the Senate at an early date. The committee will continue its inquiry and plans to make an additional report on the subject of compensation raings and payments.

Legislative proposals of the committee will include:

WANT MORE HOSPITALS.

1—Appropriation of $18,400,000 for additional hospitals.

2—Transfer to the Veterans Bureau of all hospital facilities not needed for the army, navy or veterans of other wars.

5—Adoption of definite limits and standards for training veterans.

7—Amending of various soldier relief acts with a view to extending greater privileges to incapacitated veterans.

"The sad truth," the comittee reported in setting forth an extensive array of instances of mistreatment and mismanagement in government hospitals and vocational schools, "is that instead of receiving that tender and efficient care to which they were entitled, many unfortunate disabled veterans have been treated shabbily and abominably."

Recommendations for administrative action were made by the investigators, as follows:

COMMITTEE'S SUGGESTIONS.

1—State, municipal and private hospitals should not be used for patients until they are inspected and found suitable.

2—A code should be established for enforcing order and good discipline.

3—Appointments of regional officers should be made with greatest care and there should be no political considerations.

4—Additional training centres should be created for vocational training where mental and tubercular patients are under treatment.

5—Contract system should be restricted to institutions which have been in existence for five years prior to July 1, 1921.

6—Efforts should be made by the veterans' bureau to arouse community interest in problems of rehabilitation.

7—Commissary department should be established in veterans' bureau.

8—Reductions should be made in maintenance pay of trainees who are paid by other employers.

9—Preliminary training, when needed and practicable, should be given to trainees prior to placement in job training.

WOMAN WRITER TOLD TO 'GET RID OF DOGS.'

Miss Kelley of Stoneham Seeks Homes for Eleven After Judge's Order

Miss Mary Kelly, a short story writer, whose eleven dogs have been the subject of a neighborhood feud in Stoneham, was today ordered by Judge Johnson in Woburn Court to "get rid of them."

"I'll remove them, I'll not get rid of them," she replied. She told friends she would see that the much disputed canines got good homes.

Miss Kelley, who is fifty-six years old, said she bought her cottage on Whipple avenue, Stoneham, to have a quiet little place in the country for her writing.

Her neighbors complained that her six adult dogs and five puppies kept the neighborhood in an uproar.

Besides chasing rats in the daytime and serenading the moon at night, they were cause for further disorder by reason of the fact that every time they were sick Mrs. Kelly accused the neighbors of poisoning them, so the testimony ran.

Leonard Whipple testified that Miss Kelly came to his house at midnight and upbraided him and his wife for an alleged attempt to feed her pets glass.

GLADYS REED IS AFTER $110,000 HEART BALM

Sues Millionaire Frenchman She Found Was Wedded After Alleged Wooing

New York, Oct. 31.—Gladys Reed, former Mack Sennett beauty and dancer, but lately the "dearest thing" in the life of Roberto Huertematte, millionaire Frenchman of South America, has a broken heart today, and it can only be healed by payment to her of $110,000; she would indicate it is a breach of promise suit filed here.

Glimpses into the gay life of Central American cities are given by Miss Reed. The luxuries and dash therebouts cannot be surpassed, by even Broadway or Paris, she says. It was just like that fascinated her in 1914 and induced her to stay in the tropic clime instead of returning to the North with the Mack Sennett troupe.

Miss Reed accepted a contract in Panama City, and it was then that she met the millionaire Frenchman and began the "dearest thing" in his life. Some of his letters, all referring to her as the "dearest thing," are exhibited by Miss Reed.

Huertematte asked Miss Reed to marry her, she avers. She then received a period of "doubt," in which she suspected he was already married. She declares he admitted having married, but told her he had obtained a divorce.

Then the millionaire came to New York and she followed. "I found him living in New York with his wife," she concludes.

CONVICTED OF ADMINISTERING 'LOVE PHILTERS'

Newton Upper Falls Man Given Three Months Following Testimony of Girls

The old law against the administering of "love philters" was evoked in the Newton District Court by Judge Bacon today when witnesses in the case against Charles Kinchen, sixty-four years old, of Mechanics street, Newton Upper Falls, charged with giving whiskey to four little girls, came up for hearing.

The girls, Antonia Veirbeitaka, nine years old; Mary Walsh, eleven; Beatrice Chiron, fourteen, and Veronica Rockland, twelve, all of Mechanics street, Newton Upper Falls, testified last Thursday that the man had been in the habit of calling them into his house and paying them 10 cents for each drink of whiskey they consumed.

Today, however, they changed their account, and after listening to their testimony Judge Bacon discharged that case against Kinchen. Immediately afterward, however, he issued a warrant charging Kinchen with assault and battery under the old law against love philters, which makes it a punishable offence to "administer anything that will do bodily harm." On this charge he found Kinchen guilty and sent him to the House of Correction for three months.

Miss Suzanne Pulshen, attorney for Kinchen, protested against the finding and gave notice of an appeal.

'Perfect Physical Girl' Found in Cambridge

MISS BARBARA BONNELLE

Radcliffe graduate, mountain climber and all-round athlete, Miss Bonnelle, in a series of strenuous physical and medical tests at the Cambridge Y. W. C. A. gymnasium, passed as the "perfect girl" of 1921. She puts tennis and swimming as her favorite sports.

Miss Bonnelle, Nine Years Out of Radcliffe, Passes Most Rigid of Bodily Tests

By HAZEL CANNING.

She walks on perfect feet.

She holds her back erectly, with never a curve, where curves should not be; and never a stoop where she was meant to be straight.

She is Miss Babara Bonnelle of No. 10 Carlisle street, Radcliffe graduate, mountain climber, "perfect girl" of the Cambridge Y. W. C. A. gymnasium. For, just a few days ago, in physical and medical tests, given to a large number of girls, Miss Bonnelle, nine years out of college, was adjudged the finest specimen. She passed the tests, physical and medical, the highest of all, and was rated "Grade A." Which looks as though the higher education was not so deadly at all, when out of its graduates, nine years out of college, and nine years at work, has passed the tests ahead of younger and less "studied" girls.

PERFECTLY SIMPLE.

Now, ask Miss Bonnelle how she does it, and she tells you "it's perfectly simple." She gives you her regime, which, perhaps, is simpler for Miss Bonnelle, than for some of the rest of us. Here's what she says:

"I like healthy things to eat, and I like all sorts of healthy exercise," she begins. I do, for fun, what other women do, in sheerest weariness of spirit, to get thin. After they've grown fat. But please don't put this down to my credit; it's just that some people are born, desiring to do the things which keep them in condition, while others, with poorer physiques, are not born so.

"Now as for a regime—I have one which I follow, like religion, because I like to. I sleep every night with the four windows of my bedroom stretched wide. Hot Summer and coldest, zero Winter are quite the same, as to my windows. Then I like to eat what must keep you thin. When other women linger over rich cakes and complex French pastry at afternoon tea I eat an apple and start a game of tennis before dinner time. Which, again let me say, is no credit to me, because I was fashioned so that I like the apple and the tennis better than the tea and the cakes and the gossip.

ONE NIGHT AT GYM.

"But I don't stop at tennis. Every week of my life, since I left college, I have spent one evening in a gymnasium. Most recently the gymnasium has been that of the Cambridge Y. W. C. A., because there, under Miss Munroe, the instructor, we get the sensibly regulated exercise which is best for women. Of course, at Radcliffe, I never missed the two weekly periods of gymnastics we had there, and as for the swimming pool—its swimming they gave us there established the habit, with me, for a lifetime. I swim all the year round, which, so they tell us, is one of the best exercises a woman can take for chest development and all round, reasonable exercise.

"There's another form of physical recreation which I adore, and practice whenever I can get away from town. That's mountain climbing. It might not do for some women, but when a woman is, finally, in good physical trim, and not breathless, I think mountain climbing is very good for her. I belong to a mountain climbing club. This October 19 a party of us climbed Mount Greylock. Now generally, I should say, the advice for women and girls wanting to be as physically right as they can is, first of all, 'stand right.' So much depends on all the organs being in correct alignment from fitting posture.

HANDED DOWN TO US.

But, after all is said and done, this matter of good physique is something that, much of it, is handed down to us from our grandfathers. But, handicapped, we can, nevertheless, do much for ourselves if we will go to a gymnasium regularly, sleep with windows wide open, exercise a bit each morning in our rooms, and eat the sensible, natural things instead of too many sweets and too much pastry."

So says the "Grade A" girl, Barbara Bonnelle. In the meantime, Director Munroe, at the Cambridge Gymnasium, gives out the "Grade A" girl's statistics.

Weight—136.
Height—5 feet 4½ inches.
Chest—36 inches.
Waist—26 inches.
Position—Grade A.
Lung Capacity—300.
Heart and Lungs—Perfect.
Feet—Perfect.
Eyesight—Correct kind.
Medical examination—10 points, which is the highest given.

BOSTON WOMAN AND CHILDREN GRATEFUL TO MAINE DOCTOR

To East Boston, Mass., at 12 Lamson Street, a contented family of three children and the mother live, daily thanking in silence the kind neighbor who helped them when they were sick. Mrs. Nellie Woodforde is the woman and she writes: "Having heard about your medicine from my neighbors and druggist, I wondered if your Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller—wasn't what I needed. I am a hard-working woman, working six hours every day for the Penn Mutual Trust Company of Boston. In doing this work I use a lot of strength. Besides this looking after my house and the care of my three children were too much.

I guess my nerves got out of kilt first. I worried a lot, and seemed to get tired easy. I lost my appetite. I was overtaken with dizzy spells, my eyes got blurred, and I soon found I had to stay home from work. I didn't do any housework, but the rest didn't help.

I always had one special doctor for myself and the children, but he was out of town when I was sick. I took medicine, but nothing did any good. My bowels were out of order. My breath bad, and I was shaky all over. Worst of all, the terrible headaches came. It seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought to me by a neighbor.

After a short time I began to cheer up and be myself again. My bowels were soon in order and I noticed that the dizzy spells had left me. I think Dr. True's Elixir wonderful. I am working every day now, getting stronger and picking up my appetite. I feel full of gratitude toward Dr. True's Elixir.

The children sometimes eat things which don't agree with them, when I am not around to see, and then cramps and constipation follow. I just get out my bottle of Dr. True's Elixir—the family Laxative —and find no trouble in getting them to take some.

It is easy to take. Their bowels are soon all right. It my interest you to know that recently my youngest child was terribly sick and it was a serious case. We all have Dr. True's Elixir to thank for relieving her of stomach worms. When I gave it to Louise it acted like magic, and fixed her up only after two doses."

Signs of worms are: Constipation, swollen, upper lip, deranged stomach, offensive breath, and occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, short dry coughs, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

If your children show any of these symptoms, start giving Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller.

It has done wonders for children and grownups since 1821. Internationally known. Get the Family Size, $1.20; also in 60c and 40c bottles.

Salem Girl Will Show Public How Cotton Goods Are Made

YVONNE H. VOYER

Salem, Oct. 31.—Miss Yvonne H. Voyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Voyer of No. 5 Chase street, Salem, has been selected to represent Salem cotton manufacturing company at the International Textile Machinery Exhibit in Boston.

Miss Voyer is an expert weaver. She will show the throngs at the exhibit just how cotton goods are produced from the loom.

Miss Voyer entered the weaving department of a mill two years ago, after being graduated from Salem schools. Scores of other girls were candidates for the honor of attending the exhibition.

TEXTILE WEEK OPENS WITH BIG DISPLAY

Record Display of Cotton, Wool and Silk Machines at Mechanics Building

Textile Week opened officially here today, with the commencement of the International Textile Exposition at Mechanics Building.

Never before, say those in charge of the big show, have so many different types and makes of cotton, wool and silk machines been assembled as have been gathered at this exposition.

Incidental to the exhibit are the meetings of many textile organizations, such as the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, the New England Association of Commercial Engineers and others of equal importance.

The entire history of cloth making from the old hand looms down to the most modern machinery is shown at the exposition.

There is a great warping machine that has a perfect maze of threads—there might be 16,000,000 of them or thereabouts—yet stops like a soldier at the call of the captain when one of those myriads of threads breaks.

There is another small machine that takes the thread ends of a warp in the loom and ties them to the corresponding threads of the next warp without either being removed.

It has a little finger which seizes the two threads together, twists them around like grandmother used to do, and, behold, the knot is tied. Only this machine improves on grandma's work, because it cuts the thread in the same process, performs the operation 250 times a minute and doesn't miss once in 1,000 times.

If it misses once, it comes back and gathers in the threads a second time. In case of failure after five tries, it pauses for a rest, while the mechanician wisely examines the machinery and remedies the difficulty.

Part of the building is devoted to the Power Show which is exhibiting all methods of manufacturing power. This is held under the auspices of the New England Association of Commercial Engineers.

The show continues all this week from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. each day.

Mail Orders Should Be Accompanied by Cash

For One Recipe

The Boston American Pays $25.00 Every Week for the Best Recipe sent in by a reader. See this week's First-Prize Winner, on Today's Magazine Page!

We shall be glad to receive your recipe.

Tell us exactly how you prepare your best dish; the one you like best; the one your husband prefers; the one the children talk about.

For the best recipe sent to us each week, the Boston American will give an order for $25 worth of groceries and provisions. For every other recipe which appeals to the judges and for which room for publication is found, the Boston American will pay an honorarium of One Dollar.

Twenty-five dollars in groceries or provisions, remember, for the Best Boston Recipe of the week; One dollar for every other recipe we print.

The Rules of This Cookery Contest Are Few and Simple

1—In sending your recipe either attach a sales slip, not more than one week old, from the establishment of some dealer in foodstuffs—grocery, market, delicatessen—whose advertisement you see in the Boston American during the current week or write the name and address of the store on the same sheet with the recipe, if the dealer does not give sales slips.

2—Write upon one side of the paper only.

The winner will receive an order on the store whose sales slip or name and address is attached to the prize recipe for $25 worth of groceries and provisions.

Please give special attention, for a minute, to Rule 1. It does NOT mean that you must buy all or any of the things called for by your recipe from a Boston American advertiser or from Boston American advertisers. You may never have bought a single one of them in these places. Your recent purchase from a Boston American advertiser may be of any foodstuff, in or out of your recipe. It may be for fifty cents or for ten dollars; the amount is not important. The Prize Boston Recipe Contest has a three-fold object. We want (1) for the information and instruction of all our readers, the best recipes we can get from (2) Boston American cooks who (3) trade with Boston American advertisers.

So mothers, sisters, aunts, housekeepers, send us without delay that recipe for which you are famed among friends and kinfolk, but be sure to send along with it a sales slip not more than one week old from some establishment, dealing in foodstuffs, whose advertisement you find in the Boston American during the current week or the name and address of the dealer if he does not give sales slips.

And suit yourself about the kind of recipe you select. It may be that your baked beans are famous. John, your good man, may boast that his wife's baked beans "can't be beat" even in Boston. Perhaps there is something special in the way you prepare them. Tell us about it.

Or, possibly it is your brown bread, or your New England boiled dinner.

Pie! There's a typically New England, typically Boston article. Which is your best pie? How is it done?

Or it may be cake. It may be any of the thousand things New England women—Boston women—make better than any other women anywhere in America.

And by "Boston," of course, we mean "Greater Boston." The sales slip will tell the story. If you reside within trading distance of Boston American advertisers we shall assume—for the purposes of this contest—that you are a Bostonian.

Begin today reading the food advertisements in the Boston American. The current week's sales slip or the name and address of any grocery or provision dealer advertising in the Boston American entitles you to compete.

Send in YOUR Best Recipe today with sales slip attached or name of dealer.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "No good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store. —Advertisement

"I Have Been Using Mentho-Laxene for a Number of Years"

The foregoing quotation is similar to scores of others, written by the most intelligent people throughout America. Mrs. H. H. Bartlett, Howards, Mass., writes in part: "I have been using Mentho-Laxene for a number of years, and find it the most effective cough remedy on the market; have recommended it to a number of others, etc." Ask yourself this question: "Would anyone use Mentho-Laxene 'for a number of years' if it was not the most effective cough medicine on the market?" For colds, coughs, bronchitis, hoarseness, whooping cough, catarrh of the throat, difficult breathing, and even asthma, it is quite the most efficient, and cheapest good medicine anyone can find. It is pure and concentrated in 2¼ oz. bottles with directions for making a full pint of cough syrup easily at home. It effects a saving of $1.00 to $1.50. Sold by druggists in every town in these days of high costs. Each bottle is guaranteed satisfactory by the makers. Your druggist has it or can get it from his jobber.—Adv.

Magical Effect of New Face Peeler

To maintain a clear, soft, youthful complexion, there's nothing so simple to use and yet so effective as ordinary mercolized wax, which you can get at any drug store. Just apply the wax at night as you would cold cream; in the morning wash it off with warm water. If you've never tried it you can't imagine the magical effect of this harmless home treatment. Mercolized wax causes the worn-out scarf skin to come off in minute particles, a little at a time, and soon you have entirely shed the offensive complexion, the fresh young underskin now in evidence is so healthy and girlish looking, so free from any appearance of artificiality, you wonder why you had not heard of this marvelous complexion renewing secret long ago.

To get rid of your wrinkles, here's a formula that is wonderfully effective: One ounce powdered saxolite, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you will be simply astonished at the results, even after the first trial.—Advertisement.

ROUTE OF SLAIN STUDENT IS TRACED

Mystery Surrounding Death of Young Losey Deepened by Latest Developments

New Haven, Oct. 31.—Attempts to clear up the route taken from Middletown to Buffalo by Kenneth R. Losey, thirty-year-old student at Wesleyan University, whose body was found recently in the Niagara River, near Buffalo, have served only to deepen the mystery that surrounds his disappearance and death.

Losey left Middletown in company with his roommate, Wilbur B. Mansfield, and the two proceeded together as far as New Haven. This much is known from Mansfield's testimony. At New Haven Mansfield took a train for Danbury, expecting Losey to remain on the train, in accordance with his plans to continue to New York.

Considering the fact Losey was in Buffalo on October 14, as has been learned since the murder, investigators then discovered that in order for him to arrive in the lake city on that date he must have travelled up from New Haven to Springfield and caught the Boston-Buffalo express there, instead of making connections through New York.

Only one train leaves New York for Buffalo at an hour that would have enabled Losey to make his connections at that point, and this train is a special, extra-fare express. Losey is known from the testimony of his room mate to have had only $35 in his pockets.

Immediately upon leaving the train here, Mansfield took another train for Danbury. As the train upon which he and Losey had been riding made a fifteen-minute stop here, investigators point out that Losey would have had time to do/go out after his roommate had disappeared, and connect with a train in half an hour for Springfield.

Losey carried with him a suit case containing nearly all of the clothes he had at the university. Mansfield says he remarked about it at the time, and Losey told him he was going to take all of his class "cuts" that were coming to him, passing the affair off with a laugh. Mansfield declared his room mate had enough clothes in the suitcase to last him a month.

Even with the method of Losey's travel from Middletown to Buffalo cleared up, investigators are still unable to find any motive for the trip, while the identity of the murderer and the reason for the crime remain as fairly shrouded in mystery as before.

Losey knew no one in Buffalo, as far as can be learned. It is believed in many quarters that a woman is involved in the case, but Losey's friends declared he had no wide circle of feminine acquaintances.

It is also thought possible that Losey may have been a victim of a gang of bootleggers. Some persons hold the belief that he was enticed by bootleggers to enter a rum-running expedition from Canada. This notion is scouted by his friends, however, who declared that he was a young man of exemplary habits.

—Fresh From Paris—
Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

THE daytime frock in Paris for this season is sleeved importantly or it is not sleeved at all. Seemingly the model at the left might come under either of these classifications, for the arms are left almost entirely bare, yet there are pale blue crepe de chine strips embroidered in silver that are unquestionably sleeves, since they can be nothing else. The pale blue crepe de chine frock opens down the front over a slip of silver cloth a little shorter than the skirt, and silver ribbon running in and out through the tissue of the dress about the waistline ties in a small bow at the front and has slender ends.

Red and black stripes interestingly arranged over a white silk ground make the tunic and upper bodice and sleeve sections of a black velvet chemise frock for afternoon wear; its waistline and sleeves are trimmed with cut jet. The lengthening of the tunic at each side just above the skirt edge gives somewhat the effect of an irregular hemline.

CARUSO'S LAST SONG WAS FOR AMATEUR

Great Tenor Died Happier Because He Retained Voice to the End, Wife Says

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

New York, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Enrico Caruso told me today about the golden singer's last song.

White faced, white lipped, with only an occasional hint of the flashing smile that belonged to Dorothy Park Benjamin of other days, the beautiful young widow sat among her roses and her memories, no less colorful and sweet than the flowers in her apartment at the St. Regis.

Her eyes, still shadowed by the mystery of grief, rested upon a photograph of her husband while she spoke:

"It was five days before he died. A boy had come to have his voice heard. But he had nothing to sing with; he was quite hopeless.

"I left them and went upstairs. I could hear the boy trying. Suddenly there was a golden flood of sound. It was the aria from 'Martha,' poured into the morning as it could be by only one.

"I rushed out of my room. But Enrico was before me, calling from the foot of the stairs.

"'Dorothy, Dorothy!' he kept calling. 'I can sing! I haven't lost my voice as they said I would! I have all my strength! I'm not even tired!'

"I hurried to him and found that singing had not wearied him. But it was the first time since his illness and I was much concerned. I asked why he had sung.

"'The boy was so impossible,' he answered, 'I couldn't help showing him now.'

"It was his last song; five days later he was dead. But he died happier because of knowing that his voice was not gone.

"He never feared loss of it. But he was afraid that he might be too weakened by his illness to use his voice."

Mrs. Caruso expects to spend her Winters in America. The first of each March she will leave for her Villa Signa, situated outside Florence. Summers she plans to visit various European resorts, and Autumns she will be in Paris. By such travel she hopes to make her baby the cosmopolite her father was.

SALEM CHAMBER HELPS RAISE LEGION MORTGAGE

Salem, Oct. 31.—The Chamber of Commerce of this city have come forward with an offer to assist the Salem American Legion Post in raising the second mortgage on the Legion headquarters. It is hoped that the amount necessary, $1,500, will be realized before Armistice Day. In connection with this special effort the Legion members are planning for a military ball to be held on Armistice Day. The Chamber have backed up the co-operation movement with a substantial amount to start the fund.

HAGBERG IS ACCUSED OF CRUELTY BY WIFE

Mrs. John G. Hagberg of Watertown has filed a petition for separate maintenance in East Cambridge Probate Court against her husband, Inspector Hagberg of the immigration service, charging him with failure properly to support her and their minor child and also with cruel and abusive treatment. Hearing on the case is set for November 18.

Hagberg, who was recently nominated by Senator Lodge to succeed Henry J. Skeffington as immigration commissioner for New England, is now in New York following the investigation of charges made against him when he was stationed in East Boston. The accusations involved mention of a liquor transaction. His transfer to New York resulted.

MASS MEETING FOR FREEDOM OF INDIA

Distinguished Speakers to Be Heard Wednesday at Faneuil Hall

One of the most important and significant meetings to take place in Boston in connection with the drive for East Indian liberty will be held in Faneuil Hall Wednesday night under the auspices of the Friends of Freedom for India.

Distinguished speakers, both American and Indian, will address the gathering.

It is possible that important announcements may be made, including one as to the intention of the East Indians to have delegates of their own to seek audience with the Disarmament Conference, distinct from the British group which claims to speak for them.

To those who have been following India's fight for self-determination and self-expression this is a stirring time in that vast country's history.

In the words of Kipling, "there is something stirring beyond the frontier."

TarakNath Das, international secretary of the Friends of Freedom for India, said in speaking of the meeting and the events which lie behind it: "This is a day of great possibilities in my country.

"Hindus and Mohammedans are forgetting the age-old differences. Castes are being levelled in the process of national reorganization. Unity is near.

"Already several States in Southern India are reported to have declared for an Indian Republic. Other States are on the brink of such a plunge. And Mahatma Gans Gandhi, the great leader of all the Indians, has asked Indian soldiers to cease to serve in British armies which oppress their own countrymen.

"This plea is addressed Bengali and Sikhs and Churkas, and there are signs that it is being heeded."

Marchioness Visits Her Former Home in Quincy

Surrounded by the greatest privacy, the Marchioness of Donegal, one-time Wellesley College student and famous American beauty, whose marriage to the eighty-year-old Marquis of Donegal during the reign of King Edward created a sensation throughout English and American society, paid Boston a visit Sunday.

Born in Nova Scotia, Violet Twining went to Quincy when but a girl. At the Mansion School she developed into a beautiful, vivacious and accomplished young woman. Then on to Wellesley, where she was equally noted for her beauty.

A four-year tour of Europe followed and she was presented to the court at the coronation of King Edward. An English officer became engaged to her, but died prior to the date of the wedding. He left her a fortune. Her father then left her $2,000,000.

About this time the old Marquis of Donegal advertised for a wife who would pay $125,000 for his title. The American beauty purchased it and married the old Marquis. She bore him one son before his death.

KLAN OPPOSED BY BAY STATE MINISTERS

Dr. Kneeland of Lord's Day League Brands It Worst of War's Aftermath

Protestant ministers of Massachusetts are determined to fight the formation in this State of any branches of the Ku Klux Klan.

They are united in declaring that the Klan is a bigoted "profiteer in hatred and malice," and in their attitude that any attempt to hold Sunday meetings by the Klan will be opposed as illegal.

The Rev. Dr. M. D. Kneeland, secretary of the Lord's Day League, placed himself on record as being opposed to the K. K. K.

"It is repulsive to intelligent Protestant Americanism," declared Dr. Kneeland. "Its attempt to establish itself in this city rouses the indignation of all good citizens. We do not care to see the Lord's Day desecrated by the abuse of other races and creeds in Boston.

"The K. K. K. proposes to prevent crime by the commission of other crimes. K. K. K. should stand in the minds of all people as 'Klan of Kruel Kriminals.'

"The mere fact that no negro, Catholic or Jew is entitled to membership is an indictment of its principles in itself, and condemns it as unfair, unjust and wicked.

"In the aftermath of all great wars crime sprouts rampant. In the aftermath of the World War the worst of the vicious brood is the K. K. K.

"More positive emphasis upon the spiritual and eternal and obedience to the laws of God and man are needed to meet the menace that the Ku Klux Klan is to American institutions."

LOYAL BROWN MEN FORCED TO WALK HOME

Yale Disaster Causes Scarcity of Cash Among Providence Students

"Somewhere in Rhode Island," Oct. 31.—One hundred Brown University students, who "rode on the plush" to the Brown-Yale football game at New Haven Saturday, are walking back to Providence. Most of them will be in by night.

It all came about when the loyal under-grads wagered all their ready money and pawned the family plate to bet on their gridiron heroes. What happened to said heroes, how they were mauled and cuffed and chawed by the little brothers of the bulldog, is sad, sad history.

Many of the boys were lucky and were able to "panhandle" rides in auto trucks and other vehicles Providence-bound. But not all. Villages all the way from New Haven to Providence are full of dusty pilgrims trudging sturdily toward Providence and "Uncle's."

One of the first to make the objective according to word from Providence, was a freshman named Swaney, who rode nearly the entire way in auto trucks, pleasure cars and wagons. He arrived on the varsity campus at 7 o'clock this morning, with fifteen cents left out of a respectable bankroll which he took down to New Haven Saturday.

Some of the Brown students even walked to New Haven, lacking the ready money to pay railroad fares, according to reports, but most of those who are "hitting the line" back home are doing it because they bet not wisely but too well on the eleven.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON THE DOINGS OF SOCIETY

Mrs. Marie Lee Turner's Betrothal to Mr. Frothingham Announced

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE announcement of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee of Beverly Farms that their daughter, Mrs. Maria Lee Turner, will become the bride of Huntington Walcott Frothingham is news the less interesting because of the fact that friends of the couple have been anticipating the announcement for some time.

Especially among the Boston contingent along the North Shore have there been many rumors of an engagement between the oldest daughter of the George Lees and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham of Beacon street. For Mrs. Turner makes her home with her parents at Beverly Farms and her face has been a constant visitor at the Lee residence during the past season.

Naturally, the betrothal announcement of Mrs. Turner brings to mind the recent marriage of her sister, Mrs. Francis W. Sargent, Jr. (Margery Lee) to Arthur Adams. The wedding, which took place last month at the home of the bride's parents, was a very quiet one indeed, and was attended only by the immediate family of the couple.

Mrs. Harry P. McKean, Jr., (Bessie Lee) another of the Lee daughters, is known for her good sportsmanship all along the Shore, where the McKeans have a Summer home, "Willow Tree Farm," also at Beverly Farms. Florence Lee, another sister, seems determined to shun the matrimonial limelight, and spends much of her time in the attractive studio which has been arranged for her on the top floor of the Beverly Farms house.

While on the subject of engagements—of no little interest is the announcement that George F. F. Johnson, son of Mrs. Wolcott Howe Johnson of Commonwealth avenue and Hamilton, has selected as his life helpmate Miss Madeline Snelling of Jacksonville, Fla. The bride-to-be is daughter of Mrs. L. J. Snelling.

The wedding is to take place November 26 in Jacksonville, and there will, of course, be a Boston contingent going down from Boston to Florida. Mrs. Johnson's mother and his sister, Rosamond Johnson, have returned in time for the nuptial event from an extended trip abroad. I recall Rosamond as one of the very charming bridesmaids who attended the former Clarissa Curtis when the latter was transformed into Princess Cantacuzene. The brother of the groom-to-be is Samuel Johnson 2d, and both young men served during the war.

The coming month seems fairly to abound in bazaars to be given under the direction of prominent society women, and one cannot help thinking that with such keen competition among the various organizations giving these affairs to make their particular bazaar the best, the latter will naturally be unusually good.

On November 11 and 13 comes the Blue Triangle Bazaar which will draw a large crowd to Mechanics building on those two days, while a few days later, on the 15th of the month, the bazaar of the Women's Municipal League will take place at the Copley-Plaza. Last, but by no means least, comes the annual bazaar of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, which will take the form of a harvest festival and Thanksgiving bazaar and will be held on the night before Thanksgiving.

A properly imposing list of patronesses has been selected for the ball to be given on Friday evening, November 18, at the Copley Plaza for the benefit of Hale House Settlement. The committee in charge of this event, which is one of the largest festivities before the Harvard-Yale game, has decided to limit the sale of tickets to those receiving invitations, and a card will be inclosed with all invitations stating clearly that tickets will be sold only to the holders of these cards. All of which seems to indicate that the affair will be the last word in exclusiveness.

The committee in charge includes Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., Mrs. William E. Jones, Mrs. Galen L. Stone, Mrs. Alfred H. Weld, Mrs. Orrin G. Wood, Miss Alice Bremer, William G. Perry, E. C. Fitz, Thomas O. Beal, Jr., and Alexander Winsor.

Ushers for the occasion will be selected from the ranks of the Harvard and Yale student body. The Copley Plaza orchestra will furnish the music.

BOSTON MAN ENDS LIFE IN NEW YORK HOTEL

New York, Oct. 31.—A man who registered at the Hotel Langwell as C. S. Caruthers of Boston was found dead in his room there today, a suicide. He had shot himself through the right temple with a 32 calibre revolver. The man left no word of any kind, but he was apparently at the end of his rope financially, since nothing but four Canadian pennies were found in his pockets. The suicide was about thirty-five years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighed 160 pounds. He was smooth shaven, had dark hair and dark complexion.

The Name on the Box

The famous painter is admired for his pictures. The well-known author wins esteem by his books. Both identify themselves by signing their works. The public knows that the painting is fine without seeing it, that the book is good without reading it—because of the signature.

The name on the box is our signature. We endeavor to have every piece of merchandise we sell worthy of that signature. For we wish our customers and their friends to feel that anything which has our name on the box is deserving of their acceptance.

We have been diamond merchants, silversmiths, and jewelers for one hundred and twenty-one years. We have always tried to maintain the quality, good style, and good taste of the contents of the box so that the name on the box would always signify quality to those who saw it.

YOUNG BANDITS HOLD UP TWO IN CAMBRIDGE

Victims Forced to Hand Over Money at Point of Guns

Two daring holdups, one in North Cambridge and the other in Cambridgeport gave the Cambridge police considerable anxiety and excitement.

The first hold-up took place at the corner of Upland road and Raymond street, North Cambridge, when Lawrence Casali, one of the partners in a fruit store at No. 1363 Massachusetts avenue was the victim. Three young men, all about eighteen or twenty years of age, stopped Casali and demanded his money. One of the trio had a revolver. Casali handed over $39.

Patrick J. Bohan of No. 187 Dudley street was the second victim. He was walking in Brookline street, Cambridgeport, when an automobile containing five young men drew up. Three of the party jumped out and accosted Bohan. Each of the men had a revolver and they ordered Bohan to hand over his money. Bohan gave them $14 and they drove away. The men in the car were about twenty years of age.

King Albert Opposes Disarmament at Present

By Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 31.—At least one king associated with the Allies in the war is against disarmament at the present time.

King Albert of Belgium declares that his country is opposed to disarmament now. Interviewed by Le Journal, King Albert said:

"The maintenance of armament is essential to world peace. Belgium certainly will not allow herself to be placed in a position where a stronger nation might invade.

"Military precautions will be necessary in Europe for many years."

MARINE TAKEN ON PLANE WING TO HOSPITAL

Strapped to 6-Foot Plank, Injured Man Is Flown Over Haitien Jungle

Port au Prince, Haiti, Oct. 31.—Strapped securely to a six-foot plank which was in turn lashed to the wing of a U. S. Marine Corps airplane, an injured "Devildog" was brought here and probably saved from death through prompt dressing of his wounds.

The marine was injured while on duty deep in the jungle wilds on the Island of Maissade. An urgent call was sent to the marine base here for an airplane to transport the man to the government hospital.

Lieutenant Kenneth B. Collings started at once for Maissade in a powerful Deflaviland machine. Arriving there he found the injured man so badly mangled that his body was almost encased in splints. This made it impossible for him to be placed in a sitting posture in the cockpit of the machine.

The marine aviator decided on the idea of lashing the man to the plane, near the fuselage. The injured "devildog" was bandaged to the eyes, given a special face mask, strapped to the plank, given a helmet and goggles, then lashed to the wing, near the fuselage. He suffered no ill effects from exposure during the flight of thirty minutes.

It would have required several days to transport him through the jungles to the station here, meaning almost certain death.

First Arrest in 50 Years Puzzles Town Constable

Westfield, Oct. 31.—The peacefulness of the town of Montgomery has been upset. The first arrest in the town in fifty years was made recently when one of the natives was accused of an attack on a young boy. It has been so many years ago since the town constable has been forced to make an arrest that he did not know how to go about his duties, and had to seek assistance from court officials in this city.

MR. ZERO PLANS TO STIR ARMS PARLEY

Hapgood Tells How Ledoux Is to Bring Jobless Problem Before Whole of Washington

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Boston American Staff Correspondent

Washington, Oct. 31.—In the armament conference a role of interest, and perhaps of importance, will be played by the various side shows. A number of plans are being made to mobilize such an effort.

One of the most interesting is a drive along lines that depend on the simpler elements of the Christian religion. It is being arranged by Urbain Ledoux, more widely known as Mr. Zero, and Mr. Harry Barnhart.

Mr. Zero's present prominence is due to the picturesque methods by which he has, in Boston and New York, and more recently in Washington, forced attention on the more direct human aspects of unemployment.

MAPPING OUT PLANS.

Mr. Barnhart has for a number of years, been identified with community singing on a large scale, particularly in New York. He co-operated with Mr. Zero in Boston, the song appeal fitting in with the humane religious appeal.

First they thought they would select the time of the conference for an unemployment demonstration. On further reflection, however, they decided to take a subject more directly connected with the discussions.

The present unemployment and suffering generally, they figured, is the result of the war, and as the question of armament is the central question in the attempt to lessen warpsychology they decided that the most effective thing for them to do was to organize a religious appeal in favor of some serious progress along that line.

In the gatherings which they plan music will play a leading role. Music of the highest caliqty, with a religious trend. It will be music also in which large numbers of human beings participate.

SERIES OF CONCERTS.

A good deal will be left to inspiration, as the conference goes along, but one series of popular musical festivals is definitely mapped out. This series is planned on the symbol of Joshua bringing down the walls of Jericho.

Washington is first divided into four quarters. In each quarter of the city the people who live there will be organized for the musical event. The local population will be the singers.

In one quarter the piece presented will be Handel's Messiah.

In another it will be Handel's Elijah. After these four neighborhood festivals there will be a big central sang event, on Capitol Hill, and for this some outside singers will be brought in.

The music for this fifth and culminating event will be Beethoven's Ninth or choral Symphony. The high musical quality and the religious appeal will be kept closely connected throughout.

The Carpenter of Galilee and the way He looked at suffering, at truth, at universal brotherhood, will be the inspiration of the whole effort.

PICKING CENTRAL FIGURE.

Some of the leading figures have been already selected. The man who will play Christ, for example, is a resident of Washington, of good family, who went into the movies and twice played the Saviour there.

Mr. Ledoux met this man in Central Park, during the big unemployment meetings. It was a very tall figure that he saw approaching, unkempt, with a straggling beard, thin, even emaciated.

Mr. Zero's quick sense of his needs made an instant decision. "You will appear as Christ," he said.

When he found that Washington was the spot, the actor was somewhat troubled, on account of his family and friends. But enthusiasm soon swept him along. "I will play the part," he said, "though I die on the White House steps."

The expression about death means that the man is not only worn by hardship, but also by disease.

Such moods, in numbers of people, will affect the conference. I was talking two days ago with a man who took one of the largest parts in the conference at Versailles. I asked him if he felt any difference between that job and the job of November 11.

"One enormous difference," he said. "Now there is a widespread feeling that something absolutely must be done. At Versailles there was no such feeling to help us along."

Here is a chance for clever folk.

Get the Boston American one week from today and enter the $5,000 Book Title Test.

One thousand dollars if, at the end of the sixty-day contest, you send in the largest number of Correct Titles. Second largest, $750; third, $500; fourth, $400; fifth, $300; sixth, $200. Many other prizes, altogether 219!

It is bound to be a great, pleasant, instructive and profitable contest.

But it will not be really successful, in the opinion of the publisher, unless it introduces the Boston American to 10,000 new readers. And that is where you and every other old friend can help. Talk about the $5,000 contest, which begins next Monday. Tell your friends about it. Spread the good news!

The Book Title Test begins in one week, on Monday, November 7. The $5,000 must be won.

TORSO MYSTERY STILL BAFFLES AUTHORITIES

New York Police Unable to Identify Remains of Young Woman

New York, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Mary A. Wagstaff, whose husband told the police Saturday, that the dismembered body of a woman found in a pond near Long Island City was that of his wife, walked into a Brooklyn police station and proved to the investigators that he had been mistaken.

Mrs. Wagstaff was indignant over the "identification," and told police that her husband had said that the body was hers out of spite. They have not been living together for some time, she added.

At the same time Captain Carey of the homicide squad was informed that a former identification, which had named the body as that of Dolly Bailey Higgins, was also erroneous, as Mrs. Higgins is also alive.

STENOGRAPHER'S HUSBAND SUES FOR $40,000

Claims New Hampshire Broker Broke Up Home by Attentions to Typist

Nashua, N. H., Oct. 31.—Replete with testimony as to the alleged relations between Herbert S. McElwain, prominent Manchester broker, and his stenographer, Mollie Lynch, the $40,000 alienation of affections suit brought against McElwain by Daniel J. Lynch, husband of the stenographer, was scheduled for trial in the Superior Court here today.

Letters said to have been found in his wife's possession by Lynch, and said also to be full of terms of endearment from McElwain, were to play an important part in the suit. Lynch charges that Mrs. Lynch deserted him through the influence of McElwain.

It is also stated in the complaint that Mrs. McElwain secured a divorce from her husband in 1920 only to re-marry him later. Lynch is a brakeman on the Boston & Maine railroad.

BACK BAY POLICE FAIL TO REPORT PRIZE CATCH

Headquarters Ignorant of Capt. Goode's Star Catch, Who Was Freed on Weak Bail

Despite the fact that further investigation at police headquarters showed him to be one of the most notorious criminals in New England, police at station No. 16 failed to telephone to headquarters the news of the arrest of Samuel B. Lowry, known throughout the East as "Crazy Sam," and, declaring that they had a very weak case against him, released him on bonds of $2,500.

Lowry was arrested by Capt. Goode of the Back Bay station after he attempted to steal $800 from the cash register at the clerk's desk in the Hotel Brunswick. With a companion he had entered the hotel and while the companion distracted the clerk's attention, Lowry, it is charged, made a grab for the cash drawer.

Bystanders saw him, however, and held him until Capt. Goode happened to stroll into the lobby. Capt. Goode placed him under arrest on a charge of attempted larceny of $700 and took him to the station house.

For some unexplained reason, however, no report on the arrest was made to police headquarters. Officers at Station No. 16 told newspapermen that they "didn't expect they could convict him, because they had a weak case against him.

A lengthy and interesting record was discovered, however, by Captain Ainsley C. Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation. Lowry, with a jewel thief's record, is also known, the police say, as Samuel Stewart, alias Samuel Green, alias Harry Schmitt, alias Sidney Lowe, alias Sam Lowe.

Records show that he was deported from London, England, in 1914, after serving a three-months' sentence there for thieving. He spent two years in the Federal prison in Atlanta, Ga., and his picture adorns the eRogues' Gallery. He has been arrested in New York City, Washington, D. C., Albany and Jersey City. He was arrested here last June on a drug charge.

If You Want Good Music Buy a Good Piano

Pianos are like people; some are worth while and some are not.

If you want full satisfaction from a piano you must get a good one. Not necessarily a high-priced one, but an instrument that ranks high in the price-group to which it belongs.

For again, pianos, like people, need not be aristocrats to be worth while. Albeit, those who can afford to own the aristocrats among pianos may count themselves fortunate indeed.

WOMEN TELL OF HANON'S LIFE IN THE EAST

Cambridge Girl Engaged to Man Who Left "Fortune" and Whom Police Sought

While authorities in Milwaukee are endeavoring to find some of the relatives of John L. Hanon, alias Harding, who died there on October 8, leaving an estate said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars, officials in Boston and at other points in New England declared he gave an evidence of wealth while living in this section, and pointed out that criminal charges were pending against him on the score of issuing worthless checks and obtaining money under false pretences.

While in New England Hanon was known as a traveling salesman for a face cream concern. In this capacity he journeyed throughout Maine and Massachusetts, running true to the Milwaukee reports of him only in the fact that he left a trail of shattered affections among women with whom he had become acquainted.

ENGAGED 18 MONTHS.

Further light on his activities here was obtained by interviews with Miss Winifred Briggs of No. 1686 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and Mrs. R. L. Mosely of No. 168 Eliot street.

Miss Briggs startled investigators by saying she had been engaged to the man of mystery for the past eighteen months. Hannon told her, she said, that his wife and child had died in Chicago in 1912, and that he had a brother, Reginald, who was a Methodist minister in Southern Pines, N. C. He also claimed to have a half-brother, Edward, in California, she said.

Miss Briggs continued that she had met Hanon 12 years ago, and that he had been a frequent visitor at her home. Her family have made efforts to trace him through a ranch he claimed to have owned in California, only to discover that his statement was false.

Mrs. Mosley told investigators Hanon had been employed by her as a face-cream salesman. She described a number of rather peculiar actions on his part which, she said, had made her thing at times his mind was not entirely sound.

On one occasion, she said, Hanon induced a man in Colby, Me., to drive him to Boston from that town on the strength of a promise to find a purchaser for his automobile here. On their arrival in Boston, she said, Hanon disappeared, leaving the man who had driven him here in the lurch.

Just prior to his final departure from Boston, she added, he told her that a $15,000 breach of promise suit had been brought against him in New York, and sought to borrow $400 from her.

Springfield Office-Seekers "Doll Up" for Women

Springfield, Oct. 31.—Tailor, hatter and haberdashery shops are flooded with business. A veritable tidal wave struck them Saturday. It will continue to Wednesday and all because every politician and office-seeker in the Fall municipal election is spending his last nickel for distinctive scenery.

The Republican Woman's City Committee Saturday ordered all candidates for nomination to appear before them. Inspection will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the Mahogany Room of City Hall. Upon the gentlemen's appearance depends the support of the women voters. Therefore the great demand for standing collars, clean socks, new "Kelleys" and the renovation of the old Prince Albert.

AMBASSADORS' RANK GIVEN U.S. DELEGATES

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 31.—The rank of Ambassador was given today to the American delegates appointed by President Harding to represent the United States at the Forthcoming conference on limitation of armament and discussion of Pacific and Far Eastern questions.

Secretary Denby, Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations, and the group of naval experts working out the American proposals as to limitation of naval armament again met today with the American delegates in Secretary Hugh's office.

It was assured that the general theory of limitation of naval armament, which this government believed might be successfully applied, had been completed and approved at previous meetings and subsequent discussion between President aHrding and the delegates.

The naval problem, however, it is generally understood, is the most difficult one to come before the approaching conference and there is much detail to be gone over.

Included in the consideration of naval establishments of the various powers necessarily is the question of bases, particularly in Pacific waters, and to some extent the fortifications that defend various ports.

Also included in the question of the status of the merchant marine as a potential naval force.

Last night Mr. Bryan spoke at the State convention of the Baraca and Philathea classes in session here. He devoted his remarks to ridiculing the Darwinian theory.

FUND ASSURED FOR MORGAN MEMORIAL

Campaign Is Extended Until Next Wednesday to Raise Big Objective

With the aid of many churches of Greater Boston, the total of the fund being raised to prevent serious curtailment of the Morgan Memorial industries and other departments of the South End institution took a big jump this noon when the reports were made at the noon-day rally of the 400 workers at Ford Hall.

Though the objective of $97,000 was not reached, the campaign executive committee is assured that it will be reached by the addition of belated reports and the completion of the work laid out for the sixty teams endeavoring to raise the necessary fund.

To enable the teams to finish their work and for the bringing in of reports from groups working in the more remote places the campaign will be extended until Wednesday.

The right way to buy Health.

HEALTH is too big, too vital, too elastic for any bottle to hold it. Yet health can be bought in the marketplace. But you must go to the right place for it. Nature, in cooperation with the prune growers of California, has HEALTH ready for you at your nearest grocer's.

Why are prunes so essential to good health and right living? Why has Nature in her wisdom singled out prunes as the fruit-food that keeps you fit through natural means?

Is it because their high sugar content gives you quick-to-use energy? Is it because they are rich in tonic iron and other mineral and "vitamine" elements? Is it because they contain certain salts and acids that improve the quality of the blood and help to "balance" the diet?

Yes—all this and more: it is because prunes are a natural corrective—a laxative made in Nature's own pharmacy.

The tasteful part of it is that prunes—when properly prepared—are so good-to-eat. Why shouldn't they be—these fine, full-flavored, natural sweetmeats! Especially when they are Sunsweet Prunes. For these are the pick of California's pack. Doubly rich in health-and-flavor value for that reason!

If you think it worth while to get the finest prunes California produces, specify "Sunsweet" whenever and wherever you buy. And send for the new Sunsweet Recipe Packet. It will show you—as it has shown 300,000 thrift-wise women in America—how to keep the family food-bill down and the family health up!

The right way to stew prunes: There's all the taste-difference in the world in prunes when they are properly prepared. And it's just as easy to prepare them right. First—soak over night if possible; if not, for several hours at least. Cook slowly until tender in the water in which they were soaked. Use plenty of water so the fruit will be "loose." Be sure you don't cook them too long as they will become too soft. Flavor with stick of cinnamon or lemon or orange juice. No sugar is needed.—California Prune & Apricot Growers Inc., San Jose, Cal.

XMAS BASKET FUND TO FEED THOUSANDS

mas of their lives this year unless some agency, such as the Christmas Fund of the Boston American steps in to lift the burden for the day. Some are too proud to ask for aid. Unless assistance is extended to these unfortunates on this day of days, their Christmas dinners will be meagre, cheerless affairs. Families containing children who had practically nothing to eat have been found by our investigators.

It is the desire of the Boston American to bring as much cheer into desolate homes this year as possible. It is the hope of the Christmas Fund editor that this season's fund will surpass every previous effort.

40,000 FED LAST YEAR.

Through the medium of the Christmas Fund, 6,812 needy families in Greater Boston obtained free dinners last Christmas. At least 40,000 persons were fed in their homes. 104,000 pounds of food having been distributed. The fund totaled $20,564.56 1—1 year, breaking all records.

Although happiness cannot be measured in terms of figures, the data relative to last year's work is important as it gives prospective contributors a good idea of the magnitude of the undertaking. Visualize if you can the happy picture of 40,000 persons eating a substantial meal in their homes, persons who would have eaten nothing but bread and tea if they had not been helped. Because of the great need this year every possible effort will be made to beat last season's record total.

Such men as Calvin Coolidge, Vice-President of the United States; Governor Channing Cox, Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller, Mayor Andrew J. Peters, William Cardinal O'Connell, one of the chief figures in the Catholic church in this country; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, one of the leaders of the Methodist Church; General Clarence R. Edwards, beloved leader of the famous 26th Division during the World War, and John Hays Hammond have endorsed the work of the fund. Several of them have given it their financial support. Our efforts to put a little sunshine into dreary homes on Christmas Day have been praised by many more prominent men and women in this community.

NO DONATION TOO SMALL.

The Boston American is proud of the work it does in feeding the needy at Christmas and trusts that its readers who are blessed with more than enough of this world's goods will enter into the spirit of the fund by giving as freely as possible to it so that the less fortunate may be happy on this great holiday. We believe there is no better medium of reaching the needy families of Greater Boston at Christmas than this fund of ours. No contribution is too small. Every donation, no matter how small, will be gratefully received and publicly acknowledged through the columns of the Boston American.

We wish to impress two facts—every cent contributed is spent exclusively for food and the food is given where really needed. All expenses of this great undertaking are borne by the Boston American. Not even a postage stamp is bought from the contributions sent in.

Another important factor of the work is the effort made to place the

The Christmas Fund editor believes the investigation of cases to be one of the most important things connected with the Fund, for it assures donors that their money has been used for the exact object for which it was given—to buy food for a really needy family. Follow-up nurses of Boston Consumptives' Hospital, district nurses, school teachers, school attendance officers, social service workers, clergymen, physicians and others in a position to properly judge conditions will check on all cases to see that the worthy are cared for.

MANY CONTRIBUTORS.

The high regard in which the work of the Fund is held by leaders in the civic, social and business life of this community may be ascertained by a glance at the names of some of those who made donations last year.

Among last year's contributors were: City Councillor James T. Moriarty, Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, former Congressman Samuel L. Powers, Louis K. Liggett, James J. Phelan, Edwin A. Grosier, Charles Hayden, Robert E. Paine, Galen L. Stone, R. M. Saltonstall and Frederick P. Fish.

Others who contributed included George R. White, Sherman L. Whipple, G. Willard Bartlett, Mrs. C. H. Washburn, Mrs. Hannibal L. Hamlin, Henry E. Russell, George S. Baldwin, William A. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Moran, Herbert E. Yerxa, James D. Casey, James R. Nicholson, C. W. Barron, Charles N. Shaw, Elbert Clarke, C. W. Bartlett, Francis A. Foster, John H. Lane, Walter C. Baylies, George D. Pushee and Felix Vorenberg.

In addition, donations came from D. C. Andrews, Anna P. Kelly, Barbara A. and Jessica J. Stewart, E. J. Baker, John H. Meyer, Joseph P. Collins, Maurice H. Kious, G. E. Henry, George V. Tuohey, S. Ruby and Edward A. Golden.

ORGANIZATIONS GAVE AID.

Many social and fraternal organizations, labor unions and business concerns made generous donations to the fund, and it is believed will do so again this year.

Do you wish to bring happiness at Christmas to some desolate home? Wouldn't you like to make it possible for some undernourished kiddies and their mothers to know the real meaning of Yuletide? What is more pitiable on Christmas Day than a child without food? For the joy your generosity brings to these barren homes the mother and children will bless you. What satisfaction will be yours at Christmas when you contemplate the good deed you have done.

Early giving is desirable as it enables the Christmas Fund editor to plan to better advantage. Don't hold off. If you are in a position to make a donation to the fund DO IT NOW. Obey that impulse. You'll never regret it.

PLEA TO BLOCK TARIFF PLAN SENT WOMEN

"American Valuation" Feature of Fordney Bill Meets With Hot Opposition

The Consumers' Committee Opposed to the American Valuation Plan, which is an integral part of the Fordney Tariff bill, today issued a statement explaining its hostility.

If the American valuation plan goes through, according to the committee, it will mean higher prices for nearly every article in common use and benefit for nobody except a few manufacturers.

The Consumers' Committee has headquarters in New York, but Boston and other leading cities are to be organized for opposition to the measure.

The committee is making its argument principally to women, who do the marketing and the shopping. Branch committees will be formed in Massachusetts soon.

"The American valuation plan is attacked because it puts excessive and prohibitive tariffs into effect in the guise of apparently low rates," runs the statement.

"The men responsible for the legislation are charged with having yielded to the influence of small groups of powerful manufacturers who will benefit by this legislation at the expense of the public.

"Nothing in this tariff bill seems to have been exempted from the profit-making eagerness of the groups which expect to profit by it. Even holy water fonts pay a higher rate of duty and must sell at a completely higher price.

DEFENCE COMMITTEE DENOUNCES THREATS

Members of the Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee have come to the fore with a statement denying reports of threats that are said to have been made against public officials in Massachusetts in connection with the fight of the two men to escape the electric chair, and have appealed to the public not to allow the judgment of the case to be warped by sensational reports of outrages in other places.

The statement points out that Governor Cox, State Public Safety Commissioner Foote and Judge Thayer have all denied having received threats, and terms reports that attacks will be made on these men as "time novel" rumors.

No true friend of the men, continues the statement, will resort to violence in an effort to save their lives.

BOMB BELIEVED INTENDED FOR CROWDER

Explosion in Havana Architect's Home Thought Part of Sacco Demonstration

By Associated Press

Havana, Cuba, Oct. 31.—Considerable property damage was caused by the explosion of a bomb in the home of Fernando Gonzales Verdeias, an architect, in a fashionable resident section of this city early today.

Police investigating the explosion appeared to believe it might be connected with the threats by radicals against Major-General Enoch H. Crowder and the United States legation here.

These threats were contained in proclamations distributed throughout Havana Saturday night in connection with the case of Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who have been convicted of murder in Massachusetts.

Senor Verdeias told the police today he could not imagine why anyone should attempt to destroy his home, which is distant from the American legation, and not in the vicinity of the home of any prominent American who might have been chosen by the radicals as the first victim of their proposed demonstration.

"Prices realized at Swift & Company sale of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, Oct. 29th, on wholesale cost cost ranged from 15.00 cents to 18.00 cents per pound, the average being 16.82 cents per pound."—Adv.

Watch the Film Go

That film which dims your teeth

Your teeth are now film-coated, more or less. Perhaps the film is cloudy, so the teeth look dim.

Look at them. Do they glisten as they should? If not, try this new method and watch how they change in ten days.

Millions of people have done this. You see the results on every hand — in teeth you envy, maybe. Do what they do—combat the film. Then see how well it pays.

That film does this:

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not end it. Brushing does not keep teeth free.

Month after month it may linger to do a ceaseless damage. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film. And, despite the tooth brush, they have constantly increased. Very few people escaped them.

The film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of other serious troubles, local and internal.

Years devoted to it

Dental science has for years sought to end that film. Its baleful effects make it supremely important.

Ways have now been found to fight it. Authorities have proved them beyond question. Now leading dentists everywhere advise their daily use.

The methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent — a tooth paste based on modern science. And a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who will try it.

Other desired effects

Modern authorities have also found the need for helping Nature. Our starchy diet makes this necessary. To cope with the possible effects of this diet, we should stimulate Nature's teeth-protecting agents.

So Pepsodent multiplies the salivary flow. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is Nature's agent for digesting starch deposits which may otherwise cling and form acid.

It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is Nature's neutralizer of the acids which cause tooth decay.

Each use of Pepsodent gives multiplied power to these tooth-protecting forces. And that alone, it is believed, means a new dental era.

Old-time tooth pastes, based on soap and chalk, brings just opposite effects. Such effects must be avoided, as modern research shows.

You'll quickly know

The user of Pepsodent cannot doubt the benefits it brings. Some results are almost instant. A week reveals conspicuous effects.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

A book we send will tell the reasons. Then you will know, beyond all question, what is best for you and yours.

PAT. OFF.

Pepsodent

REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, approved by modern authorities and now advised by leading dentists everywhere. Each use brings five desired effects. All druggists supply the large tubes.

This Test is Free

Simply mail the coupon for a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Watch the effects and judge it by what you see and feel. You will quickly realize that it means to you and yours a new era in teeth cleaning. It means whiter, safer teeth.

How your dentist displays the film

Your dentist, when you visit him, may cost your teeth with iodine. That stain shows up the film. Then he removes the film by vigorous dental cleaning.

Pepsodent combats the film-coats daily. It aims to prevent those deposits. Otherwise, between your dental visits, the film may do much damage.

Children suffer in particular from these film attacks. Dentists advise that Pepsodent be applied twice daily from the time the first tooth appears.

Men who smoke will often deeply stain the films. They will see most conspicuous results from any film removal.

So to all in your family this question is important. It is time to settle it, as millions have done. Cut out this coupon now.

LASHANSKA GIVES CHARMING RECITAL

Hulda Lashanska, a young Dutch soprano who has been gradually forging to the front without the aid of operatic experience, gave a recital in Symphony Hall that was deserving of a much larger audience than assembled. It is a curious fact that the public begins to rush in great numbers to hear an artist when that artist has past his or her zenith and stays away during the prime of a performer when far more enjoyment could be obtained.

Lashanska has youth, very unusual beauty, and a lyric soprano of much brilliancy, particularly in the middle register. It was a pleasure to hear her sing songs of Schubert, songs written for the same sort of luscious tones as she can produce. Her high notes are a bit labored and thin, but never disagreeable. Her technique seemed to be admirable. Lashanska would be liked by more people if they knew her.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THERE are two angles on the movies that are interesting to hear. One of the layman who speaks of what he accepts without knowing anything of the actual working process of picture-making and that of the man who understands every phase of the game and, as that the producers are up against.

Maurice Tourner one of America's most artistic and successful directors and producers made an interesting statement in a recent number of the Motion Picture Magazine. He said:

"My faith in the moving picture industry has been strengthened by two pictures to such an extent that I am a greater believer now than I ever was that we are a part of a lasting field of human endeavor.

"The two pictures that have convinced me of this are 'Over the Hill,' and 'Humoresque.' The success of such productions as these will sensationalism without mechanical thrills, and the public to conventional boxoffice angles has convinced me that the picture-going public wants pictures that are simple, human and natural. The call for the wasteful expenditures on trivial stories, made-to-order and stereotyped features will become lessened as the public emphatically shows its desire to see life as it is lived in the every day situations that each one of us is called upon to face. The industry owes a debt of thanks to the producers who have dared to get out of the beaten path.

"Humoresque," incidentally has another honor added to it. The current number of the Photoplay Magazine announces that the gold medal for the best picture has been awarded the Cosmopolitan Productions for their filming of the Fannie Hurst story. The contest was carried out by the readers of the magazine, therefore can be fairly called a popular choice.

BRINGS "LADY GODIVA" FILM.

SONIA MARCELLE, who has returned from Europe to play the mother role in the Goldwyn picture, "Hungry Hearts," has brought with her a sensational film version of "Lady Godiva." The story, which has served many artists, has been so treated that it will give the censors nothing to do. The film will probably be released during the coming Winter.

Miss Marcelle was offered quantities of roles in foreign productions while abroad but like all American actresses approached on that subject, refused. The salaries paid over there cannot compare with those given the players here.

RUPERT HUGHES, INC.

THE latest rumor in film circles of Hollywood is that Rupert Hughes is laying plans to throw his hat into the ring as an independent producer.

He is one of the few authors of the Goldwyn forces has not been idle while his stories were being filmed. He has supplied every branch of the business and has a more thorough knowledge of it than many who are already producing. His stories are among the best screened, which would promise success to his enterprise—if it becomes an actual fact.

MONTE BLUE CHOSEN

MONTE BLUE has finished his work in Griffith's next feature, "The Two Orphans," but had little time to cast about for another job. He is one of the actors in movies who doesn't have to worry about getting jobs.

MONTE BLUE

Ray Smallwood signed up on the other day for the leading role in "My Old Kentucky Home." If all goes as expected Blue will go abroad with Smallwood to make a picture overseas. Smallwood was the man who directed the striking film version of "Camille," starring Madame Nazimova.

CAMERA CLICKS.

POLA NEGRI has just finished the filming of "Sapho," which will be sent to this country for release within a few weeks.

CONWAY TEARLE has signed on the dotted line to play a leading role in a stage production, "The Mad Dog," a new comedy by George Scarborough. Tearle will desert the screen entirely during his stage work.

DOROTHY DALTON has reached Hollywood after a vacation in New York, where she has spent several weeks vacationing, and has started on her work on her next Famous Players-Lasky picture, "Moran of the Lady Letty," in which Rudolph Valentino will also be featured.

MAY McAVOY, it is said, will be starred in a second screen version of "The Morals of Marcus," taken from the stage play which, in turn, was adapted from the novel by William J. Locke. This story has already figured on the screen, but the new version will be more up-to-date.

BIG BOOK TEST OPENS NEXT MONDAY

Best and Most Helpful of Mental Trials to Start, With $5,000 in Awards

One short week and the Boston American's $5,000 Book Title Test will be under way.

The best and most helpful of all tests because it will recall to our attention the names of some of the best books in the English language.

Helpful, because it will open our eyes to the several meanings of some familiar words.

In 7, for 40 days, the Boston American will publish a drawing from the gifted pen of the contest artist whose work delighted our readers in the Movie Play Title Test and the Songs of the World Title Test.

Each and every drawing will represent the title of a well known book. On one same page will be printed a List of Titles in the List of Titles may be found the Correct Title of the day's picture.

The artist will make you work, of course, but he says he has found a way to obviate the use of pictures over the titles of which there can be any debate. How he has done this how he has arranged to avoid the use of "stickers" will be explained in detail when Test Picture No. 1 is printed next Monday.

Boston American readers who like contests will not need to be advised to place a standing order with the newsdealer. There will be a tremendous demand for next Monday's Boston American. All that is possible will be done in this office to take care of it. Many undoubtedly will be disappointed. Do not be among them!

Go to Mr. Newsdealer NOW. Say to him:

"I am going to take part in the $5,000 Book Title Test. I shall have to depend upon YOU. I will want the Boston American regularly throughout the contest. Take care of me!"

Florence Breen Confesses to Great Ballerina Her Hope to Star as Dancer

Pretty little Florence Breen, an eighteen-year-old Lynn salesgirl, has been walking about with her head in the clouds since Anna Pavlowa, famous Russian dancer appeared in Symphony Hall, last Wednesday.

Miss Breen, who has been studying interpretative dancing for two years, attended both afternoon and evening performances in the evening with a view to obtaining pointers that would help her. After the performance she went backstage and spoke to the great artist a few words of appreciation in French.

Pavlowa smiled and questioned her. Timidly Miss Breen confessed that she too wishes to star as a dancer. Then Pavlowa turned, took a huge bouquet of roses and handed them to the girl, with an expression of well wishes and hope that she may succeed.

Miss Breen lives on Main street, Chatsworth.

MUST REMODEL HARVARD FOOTBALL SYSTEM TO MEET NEW CONDITIONS

By CHARLES E. PARKER

How smoothly sailed the good ship Dope on Saturday.

Centre defeated Harvard, Cornell rolled up 59 points on Dartmouth, Williams trampled all over Columbia, the Penn State hurricane made Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado appear like a soft Summer zephyr, Washington and Jefferson squeezed the Syracuse Orange, Lehigh flattened "Cutie" Spears' Mountaineers, etc., etc.

There is a saying that a real, honest-to-goodness prophet is without honor in his own country, which causes me to wonder what is the lot of prophets who muff 'em.

* * *

There are many of the latter, including yours very truly, who are still pinching themselves and wondering, and wondering, and wondering just how the seemingly impossible happened in so many, many instances as was the case on October 3.

* * *

And not in a single instance was the victory undeserved. It is true Harvard started a team made up except in one position of substitutes, but before the game was far along all the available regulars were in there, and their display proved not a whit more impressive, if as much so, as did the showing of the second stringers.

* * *

It also is true that Captain Jim Robertson of Dartmouth who for a week and a half has been suffering small hemorrhages from an injury received in the Tennessee game, was not "right" for the Ithacan contest, but that one thing could not possibly account for Cornell's 59 points.

* * *

With other teams other factors may have figured somewhat but certainly they were not sufficient in themselves to account for this most impressive rat of upsets.

* * *

It will be some time before the football world ceases to marvel at the magic which transformed the Centre College and Cornell University teams into the effective organizations they proved to be in their respective Saturday contests.

* * *

Last year both teams approached their initial tests as "world-beaters," and, in those initial tests, fivvered lamentably. The majority realized Harvard and Dartmouth did not boast the strength of 1920, but last year a "fivvering" of Centre and Cornell proved so complete a thing that even the weaker opposition of the New England teams was counted upon as capable of overcoming anything that the Danvillians and Ithacans could offer.

* * *

And then the awakening.

* * *

For Centre, "Bo" McMillan, was expected to shine, but "Red" Roberts had failed so dismally in 1920 that few looked to him to furnish Centre's most brilliant play, and it was not generally expected that the Centre line, as a whole, could learn from a mediocre Pittsburgh lineman, the efficiency and defensive play they exhibited at the stadium.

* * *

Then again, Harvard was expected to furnish something in the nature of an attack. Against Penn State the Crimson eleven, had for the first time this season, indicated that it could score on touchdowns or two against fairly able opposition

* * *

But the "old punch" was lacking again and instead of gaining a counterbalance lead early in the contests, the Crimson found itself outplayed, and unable to cross the Centre goal line, and when, in addition, its drop-kicking are failed in two easy tries at field goals, the Crimson program was completely wrecked.

* * *

It had been reported that Harvard planned to trounce Centre this year and end the Kentuckians' annual northward journey. It has been said also that Harvard had insisted that Centre refrain from playing its opponents, such as Georgia Tech, until after the Harvard game for fear that such opponents might, as was the case last year, soundly defeat Centre and take the "edge" off the Stadium contest.

* * *

But in view of what happened Saturday, Harvard probably will not cling Centre from its 1922 schedule, and possibly will not insist that Centre's engage only "fresh water" opponents prior to appearing at the Stadium.

* * *

That Centre will continue the season without a defeat on its record appears certain, for its future opponents are such teams as Kentucky, Alabama, Polytech, Washington & Lee and Georgetown College.

* * *

What the effect of the defeat upon Harvard will be is a matter for the remaining three weeks of the Crimson season to decide.

* * *

Harvard has not the worst wound of football players in the country, but it seems to be receiving more and more evident that the once great Harvard system has been outdated, and must be remodeled and perked up to meet football's ever changed conditions.

* * *

Perhaps this can be accomplished in the current week. Princeton, Harvard's next opponent, has twice been defeated this year by teams employing tactics quite foreign to the Crimson style of play, and on both occasions Harvard scouts have been interested witnesses, and should have profitable information, not so much on Princeton's play as on the means of stopping Princeton's attack and scoring on Princeton's defence.

* * *

The Dartmouth debacle at Ithaca, the worst defeat sustained by a Dartmouth eleven in thirty years, developed as a great shock, if not a greater one than the Harvard happening at the Stadium.

* * *

Eight touchdowns, eight goals from touchdown and one goal from the field were registered against the Green in one hour of play, and by a team that last year fell an easy victim to the Green, both as regards football fundamentals and football generalship.

* * *

Many things contributed to this overwhelming Cornell victory. First and all-important was the Cornell team, a fast, active, powerful array of veterans players, with a close attack that would have driven many other teams with the cease it drove Dartmouth to defeat. Second was the generalship of the Dartmouth coaches, Thieg the coaches of the Green's backfield see, Jim Robertson. And fourth, a few tricks of fortune that threw the Hanover eleven out of gear, and prevented them from profiting by well-conceived and well-executed plays.

* * *

The unholy fear of Cornell forward passes, which came but rarely in the course of the contest, seemed to have guided the Dartmouth coaches. From start to finish they kept the Green line spread with wide spaces between the men, and Cornell, with its speedy well-ordered close attack, teamed through those wide intervals almost at will.

* * *

Cornell had picked Hatch, Hurd and Swenson as the weak links in the Dartmouth line, and their picking, combined with Dartmouth's wide-open defence, seemed far from incorrect, for, behind excellent interference, the Cornell backs and their substitutes took turns at smashing or swerving through the Green line, and, once through the line encountered only the poorest exhibition of tackling ever shown by a Dartmouth eleven.

* * *

A liberal use of hands by the Cornell interferers was permitted to go unchecked and unpenalized by the officials, and undoubtedly aided Cornell, but without this liberal use of the rule the Green would have been handicapped but little, for their close plays were remarkably powerful and appeared entirely beyond the ken of the Dartmouth team.

* * *

It was obvious from the very start of the game that Captain Jim Robertson was working under wraps. From one week ago Saturday until last Monday he suffered nasal hemorrhages as the result of a blow received in the Tennessee contest and the worry and loss of blood could not help but have an effect on this very able halfback. He was in the game during the early portion of the battle, but found it to be such a handicap that he discarded it in the first period.

* * *

To the credit of Cornell sportsmanship it is worthy of note that Robertson played three periods of the game unhurt, when the slightest pressure upon his wounded proboscis would have eliminated him from further play.

* * *

But Jim was not doing things in Robertsonian fashion. He got away several excellent runs, made a couple of forward passes, but lacked his usual drive and fire in carrying the ball, and consequently the triple threat he usually offers lacked its customary punch.

* * *

Just as was the case last year, Dobie, on first and second downs, at the start of the game, had no one down the field to check his punting kick, and, just as Dartmouth had done last year, it called for such a kick on first down. The ball rolled and rolled to Cornell's 25-yard line.

* * *

But the first anti-Dartmouth break came on this seemingly very safe play, for the head linesman ruled that a Dartmouth player was offside as the ball left scrimmage, and the ball was brought back, and the play made valueless, and thereafter, while kept one man back on all downs when Dartmouth had the ball.

* * *

The next Dartmouth kick was short, Bedell, Cornell end, was on it, midfield, and Cornell, taking advantage of Dartmouth's off-side play line took up its first impressive advance. It reached Dartmouth's 24-yard line when it was checked, while the checking was followed by a Cornell fumble, with Hatch of Dartmouth recovered. Then came the second "break," a bad pass by Swenson, and Munns, the Cornell end, pounced on the ball on Dartmouth's 19 yard line, and in four plays the first Cornell touchdown came.

* * *

A short while after Dartmouth had Cornell backed up against the Ithaca goal line, and captured the Cornell punt but 20 yards from the Cornell crossbar. But another bad pass by Swenson found Cassidy of Cornell recovering the ball in Dartmouth territory.

* * *

Finally, however, a break came in Dartmouth's favor, for Kaw fumbled a Dartmouth punt at midfield and George Moore, with a clear field, grabbed the pigskin and started for a touchdown. He was overhauled on Cornell's 30-yard stripe, but the Green took up a march there that resulted in a tie score.

* * *

Shortly thereafter Dartmouth gained possession of the ball on Cornell's forty-eight-yard line. Another bad pass checked the first play for a loss. The second effort, a forward pass, Robertson to Strang, was captured by the Green-yard again, but the lineman again decared the Green off-side and this chance to score was eliminated.

* * *

From then on the game was a Cornell processional, marred only by one Dartmouth drive which ended on Cornell's thirty-five-yard mark, when "he seemingly dazed Robertson heaved a forward pass directly into the hands of Olney.

* * *

How much of an effect these first half happenings, had passes by Swenson and costly fumbles to the Green had upon the final outcome of the game only can be estimated. Undoubtedly they gave Cornell a psychological edge and when such an eleven unaccustomed to victory in the important games finds itself meeting with success that instils edge in an all-important factor perhaps couldn't mass the enemy to "bear down" once it got started and the 59 to 7 score was the outcome.

* * *

Dobie, like Sadzik, is starting his backs very close to the line of scrimmage, which serves to conceal the passing and enables line and backfield to place a tremendous amount of power upon a given point. This, combined with the speed and unison of the players gives Cornell a powerful attacking weapon which, when varied with forward passes, should prove a difficult thing for future Cornell opponents to check.

SPORT MOVIES AS NEW AID TO COACHES

Pictures Catch Many New Angles Which Will Prove of Great Advantage

There is a movie—of a series of movies being put on which gives the most enlightening view of sport of quadrupedal ever taken from any sport from a new angle

Many taking up sport in a sequence form, speed, starting. The pictures are remarkable in showing the point which is meant to be illustrated.

In form, the pictures reveal the most perfect form of men running, jumping, rowing, men and women swimming golfing and playing other games.

The pictures show them first fast, then slow so that one may see whether the form is perfect or not, and the camera man, who evidently knows sport, caught the most perfect form of Aileen Riggin, of Jack the Hutch of some of our best runners and jumpers.

In speed demonstration, form also makes its appearance for the photographers have shown the fastest of pianos of machine guns, bureaus and men and shows each in action with comparative study of their speeds.

The most remarkable photographs, however, are those illustrating the quality we call stamina in sports. That study is chiefly of football of cross-country running of tennis and rowing, the four sports which are the most exhausting both physically and nervously.

The cross-country running pictures are perhaps the most extraordinary ever taken showing the complete exhaustion of the men at the finish. But the inspiring picture is that of the majority of experts that the cross-country is the most exhausting of all sports.

The pictures are a distinct addition to sport, a study worthy the close scrutiny of coaches and others in fact, there are some football pictures shown that show more clearly than anything else ever would do why one team is loser when it was expected to be a winner.

'CASEYS' DEFEAT WINTHROP ELEVEN

Pere Marquette Council Team Winners Over American Legionaires

Pere Marquette Council, K. of C., defeated the Winthrop Post, American Legion, 19 to 0, on the Winthrop Jr. Lee grounds, South Boston.

The Legionaires showed fine form but failed to hold back the fast and hard hitting backs eld of the "Casey" aggregation. Time and again the Plansky brothers, Vincent and Tony, hit the Leg on line for first downs and made splendid runs throughout the matinee. O'Brien and O'Leary, two fleet South Bostonians, also gave very good account of themselves.

A feature was a play in the last period. Billy Fisher intercepted a forward pass and ran fifty yards for a touchdown.

MANY USES AND GREAT VALUE OF SPOONS FOR GOLFERS

By JOCK HUTCHISON

I want to take this occasion to sing the praises of the wooden clubs. In the early days wood was favored more than anything else for a golf club. There were few iron clubs in existence, and the old boys had little use for them except in the long grass or in a sand trap.

There is nothing like the feel of a wood hitting the little white pill. This was so even in the feather ball days—every golfer nearly knows that the first golf balls were made of feathers stuffed tightly into a leather cover.

During the period of the gutta-percha ball the iron club became a necessity almost as the hard gutta-percha played havoc with the face of the wooden club

The irons seemed to be the proper thing for the gutta, but since the rubber-cored ball came into popularity and put all the other balls out of existence, the wooden club has become one chief weapon

I carry four wooden clubs, a driver and a brunnie and two spoons. I use a long spoon and a short spoon with slightly different type of faces. It is to the spoon I will devote most of the space in this article.

* * *

The modern golf course, the present ball, and the recent development in the art of playing the game all favor the spoon. There was a time when the cleek was a popular club with every golfer. No one would think of going out for his round without his cleek any more than he would today without his niblick.

* * *

But the cleek, whose name was synonymous with that of golf itself, has been relegated almost to the discards. A few pros still swear by this club, and I am guilty of using one myself once in a while, but I must admit that the club is passing very fast and its uses are few today. The next golf generation will probably abandon it altogether

The spoon has been largely responsible for the passing of the cleek. It is possible to get just as much distance if not more with the spoon, and the shot is a better one because there is not that treacherous roll that is often the result of a cleek shot. With the modern art of trapping only a high ball is safe.

It is an old saying, but well worth repeating. "There are no bunkers in the air." So the golfer of today prefers to keep the ball out of danger of all traps as much as possible.

Some golfers are still carrying cleeks, others have supplanted the cleek with the mashie-iron or a driving-iron as both are better suited to the advanced pupil, is to get a mashie-iron in place of the cleek. This should take off several strokes per round

The spoon is a much easier club to play than the cleek Some one recently call the spoon a "mashie cleek," which fits the case very well.

* * *

Just why this club is termed a spoon is hard to determine, it was that in the early days of golf it was a club used to scoop the ball out of the grass and get it into the air. They were called baffy spoons in those days.

* * *

In selecting a spoon, I can give one little hint. If I was so sure that there was only one kind I would not carry two around to with me in my golf bag.

The player will have to take it upon himself to find the proper club Perhaps his local pro can give him some good pointers on the proper one to buy

There are times when the spoon is needed from the tee as for a littere who do not trust driver or brassie on finer, more delicate shots, take out a spoon.

On a short hole, they get less distance than with the driver or brassie, and the ball drops from a properly played spoon shot without much roll

Of all the clubs in the bag, the spoon is by far the easiest to play. It should be the first simplest in the bag to learn to handle, on account of its very long face which is well laid back. It is also designed to get the ball into the air quickly

Pros and occasions often to use the spoon from the tee as a fairway wind, or on short holes around the hundred yards, or slightly more.

But the spoon was not originally intended for the tee shot. It was built for the fairway and the short cropped grass where the club can be whipped through.

If one uses it from the tee very much he would require one with a rather long shaft. It should be just a little short of the brassie. Some prefer a long face well lofted while others select one with a rounded face that would permit of digging the ball out of the turf.

Players sometimes figure that their ill is in the wooden clubs, but it is not. As a matter of fact, a spoon would dig it out better if it is shaped like a cleek.

These clubs are referred to as "bulldogs," and I find myself in a very bad lie, I would use a mashie most likely. It would all depend on the distance I had to travel.

I suggested in one of my early articles that the golfer should never buy should be a brassie. In considering the matter, I would now suggest that he might be wise to try a spoon first in order to gain a little confidence. Then, if the short cut grass where the club can be whipped through.

DELMONT DECLARES THAT DUNDEE DOES NOT BACK STAGE ACT

By JACK CONWAY.

Gene Delmont, who was prevented from meeting Johnny Dundee at the Boston Arena by the Boxing Commission, will probably battle Joe Tiplitz at the Arena A. C. a week from Wednesday night.

Delmont and Tiplitz have already met once. The match was staged in Philadelphia and the newspapers gave the verdict to the Newark puncher.

Delmont didn't get very enthusiastic over the ruling of the Boxing Commission that prevented him from battling Dundee. He pointed to the fact that the action of the boxing solons has created the belief in some quarters that the bout was to be one of those things.

One story was circulated to the effect that Jimmy Hussey, Johnny Dundee and Delmont compose a trio all of their own. It was claimed that Dundee was backing a theatrical act in which Hussey and Delmont were knocking them off the boards, as they say in tank town theatrical circles.

This yarn caused Hussey and Delmont to pay us a visit.

"There is absolutely no truth to the report that Dundee is backing our act," said Hussey. "I wrote the act myself and it is being staged by the Shuberts." continued Hussey "Dundee did back a show for me more than a year ago, but after we closed the show here in Boston I severed my business relations with Dundee.

"I am still a friend of Dundees'. I also number Delmont among my friends. But this is no reason why these two men should desire to engage in a fake bout. Dundee has fought any number of times in Boston and nobody has ever charged him with being crooked. Most of the star boxers are friendly with each other. This does not mean, however, that they engage in fake bouts.

"I have many friends in the theatrical business. Numbered among them are many actors. The fact that a friend of mine is working in the same show, however, does not prevent me from doing my best."

"I have been fighting for ten years," said the clever lightweight. "And Dundee is the only man of class in my division I have not fought. I have battled Leonard, Jackson, Tiplitz and the rest. If Dundee and myself were the kind of men who cared for brother acts, we could have been harnstorming around the country during the past few years.

"When I was first asked to box in Boston, it was suggested that I meet Tiplitz or George Brown. This was perfectly agreeable to me. I supposed it entirely possible to make either of these matches, for Dundee's name was next mentioned. And, being a fighting man, I naturally consented to battle the Bostch Wop.

"I am not disappointed merely because I can't fight Dundee, but because some people charge the bout was to be a fake. I don't believe boxers like myself and Dundee should be held up to suspicion merely because people who talk before they think desire to air their thoughts."

* * *

As a result of the action of the Boxing Commission, there won't be any professional boxing show in Boston this week. Fistic fans will be obliged to get their action at the St. Joseph's A. A.'s show at Commercial Hall Friday nights. The West End organization has been putting on banner "attendance" attractions and is sure to pay to a capacity crowd.

* * *

Harry Silva, rugged West End welterweight, is ready for action once more. He has received offers from several New England promoters and is planning to keep mighty busy. Silva avers he would like to get into a select company by battling Shevlin, Doyle, Siegal or Morjey.

* * *

Johnny Shepard, Woburn ring warrior, is another youth who is seeking action in the ring. As Shepard is one of those boys who always gives the fans a run for their money, he should receive plenty of opportunities to display his wares.

THREE HARVARD STARS ON CRIPPLED LIST FOR TIGER GAME

Harvard has added three to the list of injured players as the result of Saturday's hard game. Frank Rouillard, the husky halfback; Erwin Gehrke, another back, and Frank Kernan, substitute centre, were bumped pretty hard Saturday and will not be available for the Princeton game.

Left end, Jack Crocker; left tackle, Captain Kane; left guard, Tubby Crowe; centre, Eakin Clarke; right guard, Fiske Brown, right tackle, Charley Tierney; right end, Clarke Chamberlin; quarterback, Charlie Buell; left halfback, George Owens; right halfback, Percy Jenkins; fullback, Roscoe Fitts.

This gives the Crimson its utmost strength for the game with the Tigers. Fitts will play in the backfield instead of at end, but will be ready in case either Crocker or Macomber get hurt early in the game.

* * *

Jenkins has been working on Princeton plays with the remainder of the squad and is in prime condition. Jenkins will be badly needed in the Crimson backfield. Owen is still troubled with his bad side but Coach Fisher is in hopes that his line plunging and defensive ace will be in fighting condition Saturday.

* * *

Charlie Buell, despite his futile attempts at drop-kicking the past two games, is still first choice for quarterback. He is the logical man for the position although Jewett Johnson has been pushing him hard.

* * *

Clark's fighting weight is only 187 pounds, but he is a real battler and not apt to allow himself to become flustered by tough opposition. The guards, Brown and Crowe, are 210-pounders and extremely active for their great poundage. The tac tes, Kane and Tierney, are tough customers and they need to be wi k such a hard game as that at Princeton.

* * *

Macomber and Crocker are fairly heavy ends, and both are fairly accurate handle s of the forward pass. The Crimson will need a good alert pair of wings to take care of Don Lourie's attempts around the end.

* * *

The Harvard squad, forty-one players, making the trip will leave Boston at 3 p. m. Thursday. They will spend the night at the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York, practice Friday noon at Princeton and then return to Trenton for a night at the Stacy-Trent.

* * *

Most of the Harvard rooters will leave Cambridge Friday night, a big contingent going by way of the Fall River boat. The faculty will allow none but the players to leave Cambridge before Friday morning.

WESLEYAN PREPARES FOR AMHERST BATTLE

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 21.—Wesleyan will enter upon a series of strenuous practice sessions this afternoon in an effort to beat Amherst Saturday.

Scrigens, Wesleyan's star fullback, King, right end and Smith, right tackle were slightly hurt in Saturday's game, but they will be able to scrimmage before the end of the week

As Dr. Edgar Fauver, head of the athletic department, and Head Coach Martin presided, this has been an off season for the local college. The first game of the season with Stevens resulted in a win for Wesleyan, since then the Red and Black have been defeated by Columbia and Boston University, while the New York University and Tufts games resulted in ties.

MEDBURY'S

Says One Woman Went Into a Matrimonial Agency Single and Came Out With a Husband and Three Children.

There's a matrimonial agency where a man can get a wife for a dollar down and a dollar a week if she sticks with him for six months.

These matrimonial agencies are great things. They do a man's courting and proposing for him. All you have to have is a dollar and an address.

* * *

For a dollar a woman get get a pretty good husband and for two dollars she can get a better one, but for three she can get a mate she's not ashamed to fight with.

* * *

Of course, if you're buying a bulldog it's different, but when you're getting a husband it's better to spend a little money and get something good.

* * *

One woman recommends this agency very highly. She has had four husbands from them, already and has her order in for the fifth.

* * *

Arrangements are made quickly. One woman met in single and came out with a husband and three children.

* * *

The agency also supplies the parson. They give you a minister for a dollar.

* * *

* * *

Why should a man be lonesome when he can spend a couple of dollars and get somebody who will nag him all the time?

* * *

Some women have joined this matrimonial agency for life and then their husbands in every year and get new ones.

* * *

You get a husband there just if you would a second-hand automobile—as is.

* * *

They won't give you your money back, but they'll keep giving you a husband until you get one that's satisfactory.

* * *

One big woman went in, saw a little guy sitting over in the corner, she said to the clerk, "I like that one over there, wrap him up."

* * *

One old maid said she wanted a husband because she only had a cat and a parrot and the cat had died and the parrot was sick.

* * *

She said the bird was liable to die any day and she didn't want to be alone in the house.

* * *

One poor man went to the agency and said he didn't like the wife they got for him because she was too patriotic. One day she hit him with a pail of military brushes and the next day she hit him with a can of spy beans.

* * *

The clerk told him they'd supply him with another one and he could have whatever he thought a wife was worth, so he put a dime down on the counter in about five minutes the clerk said, "What are you waiting for?" and he said. My change.

Samosets Beat Nevins

B. C. NOW GETS READY FOR MARIETTA

Coach Cavanagh's Eleven Will Engage Westerners at Braves Field Saturday

The thermometer of confidence in the Boston College team took a big upward jump as a result of the game with Fordham on Saturday. The crippled Boston eleven went to New York to meet a stronger team, and fought Fordham to a scoreless tie.

Such an outcome to the game was not anticipated by the dope bugs, the dope being that Coach Cavanagh's eleven would be licked by at least one or two touchdowns.

This comeback by Boston College will encourage the team to enter the last three contests of the season with renewed confidence and will rekindle public interest in the doings of the home eleven.

Jimmy Liston again "did his stuff" in a typical manner in the game against Fordham, as in every game that he has played, Liston was the big ground gainer. Considering that Liston has been playing all season with a leg that would keep men of lesser gameness on the sidelines, too much credit cannot be given him.

Next Saturday Boston College will engage the Marietta eleven at Braves Field, Marietta is another B. C. opponent that has been preparing for the Boston College game as the objective of the season.

Last year Marietta put up a strong game against the Maroon and Gold team, being beaten by a score of 10 to 3. This year, Marietta hopes to hang a defeat on Cavanagh's weaker eleven.

Coach Cavanagh expects to line up a strong team against the Western invaders on Saturday. Jimmy Doyle, who has been out with an injured shoulder, will start the game with the Boston University, is expected to take his old place beside the centre when the opening whistle is blown. Doyle's presence in the line will mean a strengthening of the line. He is a regular of experience, lack of experience being the principal reason why Cavanaugh has not been able to put a better team in the field. Jack Jenkins is improving rapidly from his injury received in the Detroit game, and may be able to play the regular tackle position. Collins replaced him in the game against Fordham, but Cavanagh intends to make Collins a wingman

The Boston College backfield will be strengthened by the return of Walter Matthews to the right halback post Donellan, who played a tandon in scrimmage last week, will probably be ready to play at quarter

Marietta has been travelling at a fast clip all season. On Saturday, Marietta trimmed Virginia Wesleyan 20 to 6. Three veteran linemen will face the Maroon and Gold team, while the backfield will include Captain Robinson, fullback, and a star drop kicker, Vickers, at halfback.

Last year Marietta threw a scare into the B. C team by the successful use of the team will begin preparations for the game with Marietta Saturday

Yale defeated Bates, 28 to 0, Vermont 14 to 0, North Carolina 34 to 0, Williams 14 to 0, Army 14 to 0.

Harvard and Princeton have had considerable trouble. The Crimson won from Middlebury, Boston University, Holy Cross, Indiana and Georgia University

They were tied and all but defeated by Penn State and Saturday were defeated by Centre. Holy Cross gave them a real battle as did the Georgians. Harvard has scored 84 points against opponents' 24

Princeton has defeated Swarthmore, Colgate and Virginia. The Tigers first setback came from Annapolis, the Naval eleven getting revenge for a 21 to 0 beating by a score of 13 to 8

The Tigers hoped and fully expected to win from Chicago, but the maroon eleven demonstrated an efficient attack and a sturdy defence and Roper's boys lost 9 to 6. Princeton has scored 74 points against their opponents' 29.

The Story of an Ambitious Young Sculptor Who Comes to New York Hoping to Win His Way to Fortune in the Metropolis

Drawn by James Montgomery Flagg

THE ACTION SO FAR

Owen Storrow, a young sculptor, coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Thrush, a strikingly lovely girl studying for the stage under the direction of Hermann Krassler, a producer. Storrow saves his cousin, Charlotte Kirkner, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie, and on the advice of Chester Hardy gives up sculpture and writes a novel of the North Country. Torrie quarrels with her husband, then repents and contritely tells him she has given up her stage work. But Storrow discovers some shady episodes in Torrie's past. He leaves her in despair, but returns when he discovers she is to become a mother. Her baby dies and they go to his farm in Ontario to start life anew. She goes riding recently with Dennis Eastmen and he is killed in an accident. She escapes.

"I WAS to talk about Torrie," he said with a second, quiet yet quickly aggravating stare at the other man.

"I hope it will be a brief talk," retorted Storrow.

"That all depends on you," announced Krassler, still cool in the face of the younger man's hostility.

"Then we can regard it as ended, right now," was Storrow's prompt ultimatum.

"That would be welcome enough to me, but unfortunately it doesn't bring us to any solution of our problem."

"I wasn't aware that we had one in common."

"But we have."

"What is it?"

"Torrie."

It was Storrow's turn to renew his appraisal of the man confronting him. In that alert and finely wrinkled face with the quick glance which contradicted the look of weariness about the femininely soft eyes he detected a courage and directness which he was reluctantly compelled to respect. Krassler, he knew, had the singleness of will which spelled success, which carried him over every obstacle to the end in view. And the man who saw his au-cut good and struggled to win it without digression or diversion, was always to be envied.

Krassler's Idea

"Is that your problem?"

Krassler did not wince, but it took him a moment, or two to organize his answer to that overcourt question.

"Torrie is my star. I've landed her on Broadway with a success. If she's handed right she can repeat that success season by season, as long as she wants to call herself an actress. That means her name and personality have taken on a definite commercial value."

"I know all that."

"Then you also know that any personal entanglement, anything that stands unsavory and sordid to her public, is going to affect her name and her future."

"In this case, I do," was Krassler's prompt reply.

"Then what do you propose?"

Still again Storrow studied the silent and nervous-bodied man in front of him. And still again he yielded reluctant tribute to his enemy's audacity.

"And what good would that do either Torrie or me?" he demanded, slightly amazed at the coolness with which he could discuss a problem once painful and still eminently personal.

"I can't see that being married has hampered her any in her work." He remembered, at the moment, what Chester Hardy had once said about marriage; that it naturally closed a number of doors, but that divorce closed and locked a much greater number.

Storrow Adamant

"Your failure to realize a situation doesn't correct it," Krassler was saying. "I repeat that that situation exists. And as Torrie comes to stand more and more prominently before the public that situation will become a drag on her."

"You mean that I am the dragi" I prefer not distressing it in that particular manner," Krassler explained with a coolness that was not without its barb.

"But that's what you mean?"

"That depends very much on the course of action which you propose tofollow?"

"But I propose to follow no course of action," was Storrow's prompt announcement. Krassler shook his head almost impatiently.

"On the contrary, I decline even to bring it into existence."

"Your wife is already in possession of sufficient evidence to obtain the divorce I've spoken of," said Krassler.

"Yes."

"What kind of evidence?"

"I understand that you were detected by the necessary witness in a situation necessarily compromising, a little over a year ago, in——"

Storrow's thoughts flew back to the situation which Krassler's words had so suddenly recalled. He remembered the scene and Mattie Crowder's calm-eyed inspection of it.

"But that situation was an innocent one, absolutely and entirely innocent," he explained, nettled to find himself on the defensive.

"It would not be accepted as innocent by an open-minded judge of the supreme court," was Krassler's impersonal retort. It took an effort on Storrow's part to keep himself under control.

"Has Torrie ever expressed a willingness to make use of that incident?" he demanded.

"She may be compelled to," was Krassler's non-committal retort.

"And you intend to use this," began Storrow.

"I don't think you will be stupid enough to make that necessary," Krassler told him. But Storrow the next moment had swung about on him.

"It isn't a matter of stupidity. It's a matter of decency. And, if I'm not mistaken, the stupidity is on your side. No matter what happened in connection with this Fannie Atwill affair you've mentioned, Torrie knew of that affair at the time, was a witness to it, and openly condoned it by living with me for nearly a year. And as I remember it the condoning of any such offense exempts it from action for divorce."

Troubles Enough

"I'm neither a judge nor a lawyer But if what you say is true it remains equally true that if Torrie wants to sacrifice a half year out of her work she can go to Nevada and obtain her decree there on the grounds of cruelty and non-support. But that's something which you both ought to fight out by oh."

Storrow met the other man's eye, still marked by an absence of open combativeness.

"Why are you so interested in all this?" he suddenly demanded.

"Because, as I've already pointed out, I happen to be Torrie Throsel's manager. And I want to see her free to win over the public that she's waiting to win over."

"Thanking you, I have quite troubles enough as her manager," he said.

"But you do intend to see that she secures a divorce?" demanded Storrow, once more amazed at the coolness with which he could fence over a theme so intimate and at the same time so odious.

"Since you've put it that way," was the quiet response, "I do intend seeing that she gets a divorce."

"Not necessarily. I came here more to find out what your attitude was. Whether you oppose any such action, or whether you agree to it hasn't very much bearing on the case. In either event, you see, it will go on exactly the same."

"Who says so?"

"I say so"

"Then what I happen to say couldn't be of much consequence?"

"Not unless you're big enough to feel the appropriateness of making things as easy as possible for Torrie." was Krassler's slowly enunciated reply.

"Aren't you proving yourself sufficiently expert at that?" was Storrow's equally deliberate demand. But that taunt altogether failed to bring any answering taunt from the man whom he had regarded so long as his enemy. Storrow, indeed, was surprised to see a look of pathos in the deepset Hebraic eyes of the face confronting him. Yet it was a look that came and went again in a moment's time.

"Whatever I'm doing," retorted Krassler with his first shade of open anger, "isn't being done for my own selfish satisfaction. I'm not thinking about myself. I'm not posing as a martyr. And what's more, I'm not trying to straddle two horses at once. I'm thinking of a woman's future, the future she's got to fight for.

"What's more, I'm banking everything I've got on that future. I'm banking more than money on it—and I'm not worrying about what I'm going to win or lose. But if you haven't manhood enough to leave this girl free to put up the fight she's got to put up, then I'm glad to find out how you stand, so that I can act accordingly."

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

I PUT out my hand to protest. But the man I wished to disclaim was fumbling in a worn wallet, peering near-sightedly at the mass of papers it contained. Suddenly I understood the game he was playing. It purposed to make me feel that he was on my side and ready to share his poor little winnings most generously—with his daughter. On the verge of protesting that I couldn't think of accepting favors from him, I fairly choked back the words and waited.

Angry Protest

At this moment Dad Lee wagged his head in triumph and pulled out a folded piece of tan paper He peered at it gloatingly. My eyes followed his. There on the oblong of paper I saw just one word Then Dad Lee fairly snatched it from my eyes and folded it again.

But I'd seen enough. In queer, black, lightly jumbled letters I'd seen on Jim's ledgers and one long ago on a check to Phoebe, was the word "Cash!"

"Tell me why you are so down on that poor boy?" asked Dad Lee, wagging his head again as if he was almost driven to washing his hands of a daughter as difficult to manage. "He's been a good friend to me. More than generous. And what's more I can't forget that if he hadn't come along my route I might have missed connections with my Martha's girl. It's only natural I should feel grateful to the poor boy."

"The poor boy!" I repeated.

Dad Lee touched his head, grimacing knowingly:

"Drugs," he said. "Poor fellow. They pretty near got him. I hated to tell my own daughter about such doings. But when this poor Dicky-boy——"

He drew himself up with a start and then went on easily as if he had noticed his own ash.

"——gets doped up plenty, I feel an obligation to follow him around and try to keep him out of mischief There's no real harm in him unless he's had a shot o' that stuff. Then it's a good plan for some one who has—the interests of other people we won't name at heart, to be following poor Dick. He's awful set against folks he thinks hasn't treated him right—and he's almost mean when he's had a go with the needle. I tell you because I was a mind to.' But if you see me in funny places—ever, you'll know it's because of Dick."

Still not convinced, though I was driven from the hope of forging Dad Lee to commit himself to knowing which should tend to prove my suspicions, I expressed precisely what I felt—admiration.

A Veiled Threat

"You're pretty shrewd, aren't you?"

"So's my ally. We ought to be better friends on that account. Now let's lay low and rake in a little cash for Daughter Ann. How about it?" he asked genially.

"I don't need your money. I wouldn't take Dick West's money if I did need a loan," I said emphatically.

"Do you want to convince me that—you are—what you say?" I demanded.

"Meaning what—daughter?" he replied with ever so slight an emphasis on the last word.

"Meaning that you feel loyalty—a father's loyalty—to me."

"Why shouldn't I?" he demanded in turn.

"We won't discuss that—unless we have to. Well, then, send back that check to Dick West. Tell him that you don't run with the hare and hunt with the hounds—or words to that effect. I'll help you compose the sort of letter that Ann Harrison's father should send to Dick West."

WHEN NERVES ARE UNSTRUNG

Gude's Pepto-Mangan Builds Up Vigor and Strength

There are times when men and women cannot help losing strength. They try to do too much or they lose sleep or do not eat enough food that nourishes. Blood becomes sluggish because poisons clog it. Faces grow pale and pasty looking. It is not long before nerves get unstrung.

The best way to start a change for the better is to take a course of Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It builds the blood. The weakness from a lack of red cells in the blood is overcome. Gude's Pepto-Mangan sends a fresh supply of red cells streaming through the blood. Good blood, pure and free from poisons, starts building vigor and strength. Sleep is better, appetite keener, so that the body becomes perfectly nourished. Druggists have Gude's Pepto-Mangan in both liquid and tablet form. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package.—Advertisement.

From Experience

"Isn't this a pretty slow railroad?" said Brown. "That depends on circumstances," replied Green. "The only time it seems in any great hurry is when you happen to be running to catch the train."

"And what good would that do either Torrie or me?" he demanded, slightly amazed at the coolness with which he could discuss a problem once painful and still eminently personal.

"Yes."

"What kind of evidence?"

"I understand that you were detected by the necessary witness in a situation necessarily compromising, a little over a year ago, in——"

"Evidence against me!" repeated the astonished Storrow.

Storrow's thoughts flew back to the situation which Krassler's words had so suddenly recalled. He remembered the scene and Mattie Crowder's calm-eyed inspection of it.

"But that situation was an innocent one, absolutely and entirely innocent," he explained, nettled to find himself on the defensive.

"It would not be accepted as innocent by an open-minded judge of the supreme court," was Krassler's impersonal retort. It took an effort on Storrow's part to keep himself under control.

"Has Torrie ever expressed a willingness to make use of that incident?" he demanded.

"She may be compelled to," was Krassler's non-committal retort.

"But is she willing to?"

"She realizes that things can't possibly go on as they are," was the other's answer.

"And you intend to use this," began Storrow.

"I don't think you will be stupid enough to make that necessary," Krassler told him. But Storrow the next moment had swung about on him.

"It isn't a matter of stupidity. It's a matter of decency. And, if I'm not mistaken, the stupidity is on your side. No matter what happened in connection with this Fannie Atwill affair you've mentioned, Torrie knew of that affair at the time, was a witness to it, and openly condoned it by living with me for nearly a year. And as I remember it the condoning of any such offense exempts it from action for divorce."

Troubles Enough

"I'm neither a judge nor a lawyer But if what you say is true it remains equally true that if Torrie wants to sacrifice a half year out of her work she can go to Nevada and obtain her decree there on the grounds of cruelty and non-support. But that's something which you both ought to fight out by oh."

Storrow met the other man's eye, still marked by an absence of open combativeness.

"Why are you so interested in all this?" he suddenly demanded.

"Because, as I've already pointed out, I happen to be Torrie Throsel's manager. And I want to see her free to win over the public that she's waiting to win over."

Storrow's gesture was one of impatience. Then a new thought came to him.

"Does Torrie intend to marry another man?" he demanded.

"I've never heard her express such an intention," was Krassler's non-committal reply.

"Thanking you, I have quite troubles enough as her manager," he said.

"But you do intend to see that she secures a divorce?" demanded Storrow, once more amazed at the coolness with which he could fence over a theme so intimate and at the same time so odious.

"Since you've put it that way," was the quiet response, "I do intend seeing that she gets a divorce."

"And you came here for the purpose of obtaining my co-operation in an affair which, under the circumstances, must be a collusory one."

"Not necessarily. I came here more to find out what your attitude was. Whether you oppose any such action, or whether you agree to it hasn't very much bearing on the case. In either event, you see, it will go on exactly the same."

"Who says so?"

"I say so"

"Then what I happen to say couldn't be of much consequence?"

"Not unless you're big enough to feel the appropriateness of making things as easy as possible for Torrie." was Krassler's slowly enunciated reply.

"Aren't you proving yourself sufficiently expert at that?" was Storrow's equally deliberate demand. But that taunt altogether failed to bring any answering taunt from the man whom he had regarded so long as his enemy. Storrow, indeed, was surprised to see a look of pathos in the deep-set Hebraic eyes of the face confronting him. Yet it was a look that came and went again in a moment's time.

"Whatever I'm doing," retorted Krassler with his first shade of open anger, "isn't being done for my own selfish satisfaction. I'm not thinking about myself. I'm not posing as a martyr. And what's more, I'm not trying to straddle two horses at once. I'm thinking of a woman's future, the future she's got to fight for.

"What's more, I'm banking everything I've got on that future. I'm banking more than money on it—and I'm not worrying about what I'm going to win or lose. But if you haven't manhood enough to leave this girl free to put up the fight she's got to put up, then I'm glad to find out how you stand, so that I can act accordingly."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

I GOT a letter from Ethel Harrison today, sed Ma to Pa last nite She is happily married to a rich gent, sed Ma. I always knew Ethel wud father her nest, sed Ma. She was a keen gurl at skool.

Well, sed Pa, you dident marry a miljunair like pore litlel frend Miss Harrison, sed Pa, but you married a gent wich has a good rating in the wurld of men, sed Pa, a gent with a sunny smile & a hart of gold & say nothing of a keen intelleck, sed Pa. Well Supplied

A prominent politician, although a Scotsman, relates a story against himself and his fellow countrymen. While on a visit to the Canary Islands once he was feeling very unwell, and inquired of an official, "Are there many Scotsmen in these parts?" "Yes," was the reply, "just a few, but quite enough"

The Good Old Times

A stranger was talking to an old sailor The sailor said, "Yes, sir, my father was in the Navy." "In the Navy, was he?" said the stranger. "What was his official capacity, may I ask?" "Four to five quarters, sir," replied the old sailor.

Best Recipe Contest

All New England Housewives Are Asked to Compete—For Rules See Advertising Pages

THE winner of the first prize in the Boston American Best Recipe Contest this week lives in Everett. Miss Alice Bradley, the judge, chose her fried chicken from among many excellent recipes.

THE WINNER

Alice May Nason,

92 Cottage Street Everett Mass.

NEW ENGLAND STYLE FRIED CHICKEN

Materials required: Fowl weighing from 3½ to 5 pounds, cut as for a fricassee; three slices of fat bacon, one tablespoon each brown sugar and salt. To prepare: Cut bacon in dice and fry on iron spider. Wipe each portion of chicken and dip in flour. When bacon begins to brown, move the scraps to one side of the spider and quickly brown the floured chicken, not frying through. In an ordinary bean pot put the onion (peeled) and pack in the browned chicken. On top of the chicken put the bacon scraps and sugar and salt. Add cold water to cover, and bake tightly covered in a slow or moderate oven. I usually allow about three hours for cooking, looking at it about once an hour to be sure that there is water enough to cover. To serve: Place the cooked chicken in a large platter and thicken the gravy with flour or cornstarch before pouring over it. Serve with this fried chicken either corn fritters or sweet potatoes cooked Southern style.

MISS ALICE MAY NASON

An order for $25 worth of groceries and provisions on the Mohican Market has been sent to the winner.

Household Suggestions

Do you know there are two methods of frying—deep and shallow? For the former a strong, deep pan is needed, holding enough fat to cover entirely the food that is to be fried. This is used for fish, rissoles, etc. For shallow frying an ordinary frying pan is used, with very little fat—just enough to prevent the food from sticking. Such things as sausages, pancakes, eggs, etc., are fried like this.

A soup which is healing and comforting for anyone suffering from cold is made by slicing one or two onions finely, simmering them in a little water for twenty minutes and adding salt and pepper to taste, and a few bread-crumbs before serving.

A PARTY IN CHURCH

—By W. A. McKeever—

IN a congested business district of a large city stands a commodious church building and here hundreds of children assemble at 9:30 every Sunday morning for a happy party. Although in a church where some would think the atmosphere too sacred to permit of even loud talk, these lively boys and girls laugh, sing, romp and perform what to all intents and purposes they would at any week-day party.

It is the preliminary of a Sunday School.

Now, there is a signal and all hurry into a large, darkened room where a Biblical movie is ready to start. It is an enticing little drama representing one of the stirring scenes of the Old Testament. It was easily observed that the children were taking their "show" seriously and not as a sugar-coated moral fed to them via the movies.

Later, a round trip through the many Sunday School classes soon proved that the Bible lessons also were being brought into the same vital relation to the child's interest as the play. "We have discovered the secret of a big attendance," remarked a cheerful teacher, "and that is to make the Sunday school a place of genuine happiness for all who come."

Wake up, you lazy members! Drop your mask of mediaeval church sadness. Tune your voices to the bold, happy pitch of childhood. Laugh and frolic with the merry boys and girls as an "opening exercise" for the Sunday school.

Too Expensive

"Can you give me a bit to eat?" "Have you no trade, my poor man?" "Yes, I make counterfeit money, but it isn't worth what the materials cost."

DANDERINE

Stops Hair Coming Out; Thickens, Beautifies.

35 cents buys a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store. After one application you can not find a particle of dandruff or a falling hair. Besides every hair shows new life, vim, brightness, more color and abundance.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and never about it. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the inflamed membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Advertisement.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

17 Years' Difference

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About a year ago I met a man thirty-eight, whom I have grown to love. My mother objects to my going about with him on account of his age. Do you believe a girl of twenty-one can be happy with a man seventeen years her senior, if his character is sterling and he has always treated her with the utmost respect, consideration and generosity that she finds she cannot get accustomed to any one else? Do you think my mother is justified in her objections?

R. K.

No one can promise you anything in a situation like this. Your mother's desires are logical, but the facts don't always bear them out. When two people really love and understand each other, the greatest difference in age and viewpoint may not count against their happiness. But the man you love belongs practically to the generation ahead of you. Do you feel that you will be able to live together happily in the give and take of everyday life?

No Cause for Alarm

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About six months ago I met a young lady whom I learned to love dearly. The other day she told me the first couple of months she thought of me night and day. She insists that she still likes me, but not as in the beginning.

Is it possible that gradually her regard will wane and we be just friends? Can a person love as she claims to have loved and then that love cool?

PERPLEXED

I DOUBT if the feeling through which the girl went at first was worthy of the name love. I'd call it an infatuation. Now that it has steadied and isn't wild and turbulent, it's worth more. Perhaps there's far more happiness for the girl—and you as well—in this saner affection and real love than in any wild gush of feeling. Don't worry about the lasting quality of the latter. Only wild emotions fall and fade.

R. K.

Optical Proof

"What is a furlough?" asked a teacher. "It means a mule," replied Susan; "I have a book which says so." Would you show me the book?" asked the teacher. Susan got the book and opened it with some triumph at a page where there was a picture of a soldier beside a mule. Below the picture were the words, "Going home on his furlough."

First Impression

Proud citizen: "So you have been visiting our schools, eh? Splendid, aren't they? Magnificent discipline, superb buildings, beautiful furnishings. By the way, I want to ask you what was the first thing that struck you on entering the boys' department." Visitor: "A pea from a pea-shooter."

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels in a few hours and you have the comfort of knowing how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the stomach, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

The air is clearing. Business is forming its face forward, with at least a little greater courage. Activity is increasing moderately in several important directions.

Settlement of the threatened railroad strike has brought general relief, even though the terms satisfied neither the men's leaders nor the more aggressive executives who would have preferred a fight to a finish. The public, however, is heartened by the demonstration that no combination of workers can intimidate or defy the government.

We can now look for moderate buying of equipment and materials by the railroads, especially as steel rails and other steel products are now regarded as probably having reached their low level for the time being. September's railroad earnings show profits averaging within one per cent. of the return prescribed by law, and while important cuts are being made in rates at different points, traffic should increase sufficiently to offset this. Railroad credit will probably strengthen, and railway securities recover appreciably.

* * *

Let us pick at random a few other significant developments:

The Bethlehem Steel Company announces that it is going ahead with extensions, confident that the country will by and by demand greater productive capacity.

The New York Stock Exchange had a "million-share day" last week, and counts upon others.

The Treasury has lowered the interest yield on Treasury certificates; the Federal Reserve Banks show a net high reserve ratio; money is becoming more plentiful and business borrowers are now looked upon with greater favor by lenders.

From Germany comes the welcome and entirely unexpected news that the November 15 indemnity instalment has been fully provided for, mainly through goods and services furnished.

Sterling lately has risen to within a few cents of $4 to the pound.

An official report on Mexico's oil resources has had a most stimulating effect in financial circles.

* * *

The most significant and encouraging development of all is a wholly intangible one. It is now the exception rather than the rule for men of affairs to harbor pessimistic forebodings the outlook. "Experts" who glue their noses to endless sheets of figures and imagine that they can read in them exactly what lies ahead are now waking up to the fact that the worst is over and that better conditions are developing. Until very recently nothing but pessimism exuded from such sources. When statements being made in this column that foundations were being laid for early improvement, the statistical pessimists and some others shook their heads and pitied such ignorance.

Let a few more conspicuous industrial leaders come forward with brass-tack statements such as that made by Schwab and the pace of the recovery would increase at a rate disconfiting to those who are still wrapped up wholly in the harrowing events of the past.

* * *

From now on more attention will be focused on Washington. The proceedings at the conference on armaments will doubtless have a marked influence on sentiment in the highest places and will also be followed with genuine interest by the public.

Business, however, is anxiously awaiting action by Congress in several vital directions. As George Eastman, one of America's very large employer, writes me: "A satisfactory settlement of the tax and tariff questions by Congress would greatly accelerate a return to normal conditions." So far Congress has dilly-dallied over both, to the detriment of every household in the land.

The doings of the Interstate Commerce Commission, particularly in the matter of ordering railway rate reductions, will also be closely scrutinized.

* * *

The present disposition is to have faith in the outlook as a whole, in concrete developments in industry. In commerce, in finance, in agriculture. In labor, continue encouraging between now and New Year the country will be able to weather any disappointment that may be inflicted by the mishandling of one or two of the momentous matters now engaging attention at Washington—a contingency that it were well to be prepared for.

* * *

Stocks irregular at Noon; Call Money Drops to 5%; Demand Sterling Down

LEADING OILS RECEDE IN NEW YORK

Rails Are Mixed in Movement; Steels Are Firm, but Show Small Changes

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The New York market was irregular at noon, prices being below the highest level of the week, and the action late in the second hour. Leading bills were among the weakest issues. Low priced oils were strongest. Trading was active, first hour transactions exceeding 215,000 shares.

Call money opened at 5½ per cent., but within a few minutes was quoted at 5 per cent. Foreign exchange was irregular, demand sterling starting ¾ cents lower at $3.93½.

MOST ISSUES UP.

Most issues were up at the opening, with price changes small in either direction. Royal Dutch was the only petroleum issue to display pronounced strength at the start, soon showing more than two points gain. Mexican Petroleum receded almost as much before rallying. Houston opened off a fraction and kept on declining until it was more than a point under Saturday's close. Rails and equipments were irregular as to trend, Baldwin being especially strong among the latter. It was active as well. Except-ing Delaware, Lackawanna & Western rail fluctuations were narrow. The road mentioned began more than a point higher. Steels were a firm class, with Crucible up more than a point within a few minutes. Studebaker was the only active motor. Auto shares, in fact, were rather heavy. Tires weakened on a few transactions. Copper, sugar and shipping shares were firm but quiet. Shipping specialties included American Woolen, National Lead, Famous Players, International Paper and Davidson Chemical. The market maintained a good tone during the first hour and a half, becoming rather stronger than at the outset. Domestic bills had improved.

GOOD BORROWING DEMAND.

The borrowing demand for stocks was good at the end of the week, and American Sugar loaned at 1-32 premium. The prevailing rate for industrials was 5 per cent., and for railroads 4½ per cent. The stock market continued to be almost wholly professional this morning. Its strength was attributed chiefly to covering, and the tone was inspired more by the technical situation than by any developments yesterday. The New York bank statement was about what was looked for. Surplus reserve increased $18,809,180, loans decreased $21,888,000, and there was no great change as regards deposits. One statement from New York is the sentiment is bullish in the West, and that some large interests in that section are taking the long side. In some quarters it is said that business there is showing general improvement. In the East industrial depression is still causing concern.

German American Petroleum Co. of Hamburg, Germany, has declared a 25 per cent. dividend.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 31.—Stronger cables from Liverpool, coupled with rather active buying from Wall street, were the features in the cotton market at the opening today. First prices were unchanged to 10 points higher. Japanese interests and Liverpool also bought on the rail, but the market attracted such heavy selling, particularly from spot concerns that shortly after the start it was generally quoted 10 points net lower, with December selling 20 points from initial levels. Opening prices were: December, 18.80; March 19.70; May 19.80; July 17.95; Sept. 17.75.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Wheat opened unchanged, corn was unchanged to ½ higher and provisions were unchanged to 10c lower. Opening prices were: Wheat, Dec., 1.08 to 1.08½; May, 1.12½ to 1.12¾. Corn, Dec., 48½ to 48¾; May, 51¼ to 51½. Oats, 33½ to 33¾; May, 38¼ to 38⅜.

FOOTBALL PLAYER'S LEG BROKEN IN GAME

Joseph W. Henrien, twenty-five years old, of No. 566 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, sustained a fracture of the left leg during a football game at Fenway Park when he was tripped by a short iron spike that projected a few inches above the ground on the middle of the playing field. Park attendants were at a loss to explain the presence of the spike on the field. Henrien was taken to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

CARS CRASH IN FOG THAT COVERS NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 31.—Dense fog enveloped New York today. Several inbound steamers cast anchor in the lower bay and waited for the fog to lift. Ferry schedules were disorganized, and some routes were temporarily abandoned. The fog was the cause of a trolley car collision in Brooklyn, in which fifteen persons were slightly injured.

PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY RAPS LLOYD GEORGE

Professor Walter B. Holloway of Chicago assailed Premier Lloyd George and declared it needs only America's recognition of the Irish republic to have other nations follow suit, in a stirring address delivered at a memorial meeting for Terence MacSwiney, late Mayor of Cork, held in Tremont Theatre. This professor said that Lloyd George is trying to make the American people believe that he will settle the Irish question so that he may come here and succeed in having England's war debt cancelled.

State President John F. Harrigan of Worcester called the meeting to order. John Morton of Boston was made permanent chairman of the State American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic, under whose auspices the meeting was held. Rev. Michael Ryle, S. J., of Holy Cross College, Worcester, delivered the invocation.

RAILROADS ARE WORRIED, SAYS EVANS

Questions Left by Strike Menace Are Unanswered, and Government Ownership Looms

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Picture some large class of proprietors in this country desiring to get rid of their property and business and quit the industries in which they are engaged—say all the hardware dealers, dry goods merchants, farmers—because for some reason their life has become intolerable. What would be the effect on the whole country?

There would be such a shifting about, such a panic, such a rushing hither and yon, as we never have seen, if the wish of these persons were carried out, that enough indeed if all were of that mind and the properties and industries were only threatening to come on the market.

This is not the mental state of all the leading railroad men, but, to judge from what one hears from many sources, it is the feeling of a great majority of them. One thing that is those who are responsible for the administration of the property and answerable to the stockholders. Their position has become unbearable and some of them are ready to throw it overboard, painfully biting their lips, and still others whispering to their friends of their sorrows.

LOOKING TO UNCLE SAM

The strike is over, the questions unanswered, and the parties directly interested looking for the next thing. The fighters arms or rather lying awake on their arms. Over and over again the railroad men have faced toward the east, where Washington is, and silently prayed for succor from that source.

Their pleadings have been answered with the Adamson law, which has worked, and the Plumb-Cummins act, which has not worked, that is to the point of yielding the income that was impliedly promised. They are now asking whether there can be any assured net revenue and also whether actual management of the railroads by the men ostensibly managing them is possible. If these questions are not answered in the affirmative, "give us government ownership," is their ardent wish.

It is well known that some of the railroad executives have expected government ownership as the ultimate outcome.

WHAT WOULD FOLLOW.

In that case proprietorship presumably would be established by the purchase of the stock issues in most instances, the mortgages and similar liabilities to remain on the properties and payment would be made in obligations of the United States government, which would add just so much to our debt, but with the offset of the property acquired.

The bonds issued by the government would of course be subject to the same conditions as other bonds; that is, they would fluctuate as have the Liberty issues, hence during the inferiority of government management to private management they would be a good investment.

This proprietorship and management, would, however, be more trustworthy than that of a shareholder of 2,000,000 men under the leadership of union officials, which is the form of organization now held by many people to be the real arbiter of the destinies of the roads. One can reasonably prefer the "agricultural block" for rulers as representing a much larger number of people.

Everybody knows the reasons that were given out for the compromise, but the exact process and the unseen motive are a matter that many people would like to know more about.

Back of this process were the people, who were scared, who deprecated any break in the improvement in business and who were glad to get out of the situation by almost any method.

CREDIT FOR HARDING.

A well known student of such affairs from the Chicago viewpoint gives President Harding credit for the achievement and declares that it was the biggest thing he ever did. He says, moreover, that the danger was far greater than was commonly supposed. Indeed, that there would have been a huge strike of all the workers on the railroads, the difference among the various groups would have been forgotten in the face of the common enemy, he says.

It is not surprising, nor is it surprising under all the circumstances, that a lot of these people would like to give up their jobs and become government clerks.

Lynn Shoe Situation

Although Lynn shoe factories are operating at only 25 per cent, of capacity, manufacturers there are swinged to refuse business, because they cannot compete with the West because of the higher cost of local labor.

Cotton Goods Trade Dull

The cotton goods trade was dull last week and the opening of fall garments might be delayed by a railway strike. Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market are estimated to have totaled 100,000 pieces for the period.

Did you ever notice how we take the big things for granted—and make a great fuss over the little, freakish things?

Men studied ECLIPSES of the sun and moon LONG BEFORE THEY BEGAN TO THINK ABOUT THE DAILY RISING AND SETTING OF THE SUN.

They took for granted the marvellous truths of the universe and worried over the little eccentricities of natural phenomena. If they had studied the sun's apparent movements as they studied the eclipses, they might have discovered much earlier that the earth is round. They might have dared to go outside Gibraltar's Straits, or "The Pillars of Hercules," with no fear of falling off the earth's edge, and they might have discovered America earlier and wound up the trust phase of life centuries back.

We have all marvelled at the ingenious pneumatic tire which upholds us on our bicycle or runs over us on someone else's automobile. The ball-bearing axle and the tire of air make us think and scratch our heads and say, "How wonderful is man!"

What about the big ball of earth you live on?

Did it ever occur to you that the earth runs on an air tire also, turning round and round on its spiral spin through everlasting space with the ether for ball-bearings?

It IS that, absolutely. And, besides keeping us alive, that tire of air saves us and our planet many millions of bumps that would make life here impossible.

Have you any idea how many hundreds of millions of meteors have struck this earth?

Do you know that we are bombarded by meteors every day, as the tire of a flying automobile is bombarded with pebbles? Do you know that the tail of a comet hit us and swiped us, at least once?

The meteors—flying masses of rock, iron, copper and other metals—vary in size from small pebble-sized dust to stone projectiles the size of a house.

Without our pneumatic tire, THE AIR, these meteors would smash down on our earth's surface constantly, slaughtering us, wiping out nations at certain times of year when we pass through millions of meteors in our journey around the sun.

But the dangerous meteor, flying with speed incredible, comes in contact with our atmosphere AND IS MELTED. In spite of the tenuity of our atmospheric air, the friction at such great speed suffices to melt the projectiles that bombard us, so that they fall to the earth in harmless, disintegrated dust—and do us no harm.

Constantly this dust of disintegrated meteors falls upon the surface of the earth; every year it raises the bottom of the ocean just so much. And if we last long enough it will fill up the ocean, so that, like the Martians, we shall have to dig canals to hold the ocean's waters and prevent their covering the earth two miles deep all over and driving us to death or a houseboat civilization.

Does it interest you to think of these things—out of which not a cent can be made? Do you like the notion that we little human creatures simply live inside of a pneumatic tire, breathing the air in the tire, and traveling through the immensities of space shielded by that tire from the rough spots in our celestial journey, and digging our food out of the rim of the wheel on which we travel?

Do you take an interest in Nature's great carrying plan—moving all her loads in the shape of rolling spheres that move without friction, from the tiny blood corpuscle that runs up inside your neck to the giant sun that whirls our earth along in its train?

It is funny to think of us little creatures adrift in the ocean of space. We set up our little machines on this great driving wheel that carries us. We struggle with one another, have our comic fights for newspaper supremacy, political supremacy, financial supremacy. We kill one another in quarrels as to the nature of the power that rules us, and we crow loudly when we achieve some trivial little success.

If we could hear their talk they would seem to us as funny as we seem to the big spirits that look into the earth's big air tire to watch our struggles and listen to our boasting.

For a "Doughboy Day"

President Asked to Name One So That People Won't Forget

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

President Harding has been asked by the Larchmont Post of the American Legion of New York to proclaim a special "Doughboy Day," when every American shall be urged to do some act of kindness for needy veterans.

As we near the third anniversary of the armistice and recall the exuberance of joy and lavishness of promise with which we celebrated the first news of victory, the present spectacle of neglected veterans, many disabled, others eager for self-support but jobless, must sting us with a feeling of shame and contrition.

Surely among the millions of our citizenship there must be some who would welcome a summons to make partial atonement.

One day out of all the days of the year set apart as a day of recollection would be little enough for the boys who gave so many days of hardship and took so many dire hazards for those of us who remained behind.

Old Maids Gone From Britain

By BETTY CHESTER

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Personally I am, at the moment, rather sorry for men. They simply cannot get over the fact that that familiar type of female known for so long as the "old maid" exists in the land no longer. The war killed her—and they do miss her dreadfully.

Old-maidishness, of course, was a term that described a peculiar mental state, very different from the mere "unmarried woman." The old maid was thin and haggard from chasing after men, and had tempered and spiteful and disappointed. She had never in her life done anything but talk scandal and at intervals dust chins. Her one use in life was to provide a butt for every man's subtle sense of humor. On the stage, in novels and in real life she ministered to men's vanity as a sex.

"Poor faded thing," they would remark complacently. "Pathetic, disappointed object! She can't get a husband. That is what happens to a girl who can't get me!"

And now in place of this harmless amusement they are desperately attempting to start another. This consists in labelling every unmarried woman, both young and old, as "superfluous." But it is no good, not the slightest—and men are beginning to know it. For the modern girl does not care in the least what any man calls her! She has made, you see, one or two great discoveries, and she is not going to forget them. One is that, though marriage is a career, it is only one in many, and it is apt to be the dullest of the lot. And another is that it is the men who are superfluous—at any rate to her happiness.

Wit and Wisdom

Maybe one of the reasons people don't denounce the butcher when he goes into the icebox for undressed chicken is because he's naturally such a cut-up.

Study of U. S. Archaeology

By Garrett P. Serviss

If you are looking for an intellectual occupation, something fascinating and useful, take up American archaeology. We have got on this continent an ancient, untold and unwritten history, the solution of whose mysteries will some day win fame for the discoverer of their key and afford pleasure and satisfaction to millions of readers.

When white men came here they found in the territory now constituting the United States no inhabitants except a few scattered thousands of red men, unrelated to any of the peoples of Europe. The red men had no history. Their traditions concerning their own origin were cloudy and uncertain.

But after the whites had begun to settle and develop the country they found, without searching, many strange footmarks of which the Indians could tell them nothing except that they had not made them.

People Superior to Indians

It became evident that at some time in the past the country had been inhabited by people capable of achievements beyond the capacity of the savage Iroquois, Algonquins and other Indian tribes which the European invaders found in possession.

But a curtain was drawn over all that earlier period, and the imagination alone could picture what was behind it. That certain has never been removed. Some writers belittle the importance of its concealments; others, perhaps, exaggerate them. None can deny their intense interest.

As to the nature of these footmarks of a vanished people, an idea may be formed from the statement that they consist mainly of artificial structures of earth and stone, sometimes of vast size, many of which look like fortifications, while others were plainly burial mounds or monuments and a few bear a mysterious character, presenting details which suggest that they were intended as religious symbols.

A most remarkable example of this kind is the celebrated "serpent mound" in southern Ohio, in which the unknown builders piled up a winding mound several hundred feet long, imitating the form of a gigantic coiled serpent, or dragon, with extended jaws.

Below Wheeling, on the Ohio river, there is a pyramidal mound, 900 feet in circumference and 70 feet in height, comparable in cubic content, as has been remarked, to some of the pyramids of Egypt, although it contains no masonry, and was simply heaped up by main strength, without, as far as the evidence goes, the aid of machinery. It must have required the labor of thousands of men, continued, perhaps, for many years.

This mound when explored with cuttings, was found to have a vault in the centre, containing two human skeletons, one without ornaments and the other encircled with hundreds of ivory beads. In another vault, between thirty and forty feet above the first, was another skeleton, among whose ornaments were copper rings and bracelets.

In Ohio alone, it has been estimated, there are more than eleven thousand prehistoric structures, consisting partly of stone and partly of earth. Many of them are enclosures which may have been fortifications.

Copper Vessels

Often the remains of cisterns are found within the circumvallations, which, in some cases, rise to a height of twenty-five to thirty feet above the surrounding land. The area included in the walls varies from ten or twenty up to fifty acres. The outlines of the enclosures are symmetrical, generally circular or elliptical, and sometimes forming regular polygons.

A certain degree of cultivation on the part of the builders is indicated by the copper and earthen vases, sometimes of attractive form and decoration, and the carefully carved pipe-bowls that have been discovered in, and in the neighborhood of the mounds.

There is abundant evidence that the mound builders worked some of the copper deposits of the Lake Superior region. More than fifty thousand of their stone tools used in digging out the native copper have been found scattered about their abandoned pits.

Letter to the Editor

Salvation Army Appeal

Editor Boston American:

Having read in your valuable paper that the Boston American is always glad to call attention to good causes, seeking contributions from public-spirited citizens, may I call your attention to another splendid organization which will tomorrow present its claim for a budget of 1921-22 to its ever-responsive and sympathetic friends in Boston?

Sometimes the question is asked, "Are the requests made to the Salvation Army officer from the poor alone?" "By no means" we quickly answer. Many and varied are the opportunities of the Salvation Army officer and weird and strange and sad and queerly different are the tales poured in our ear. They come from the hard-headed, busy business man, who sometimes stops long enough to shed real tears because he's in real trouble, and finally manages to pull a handkerchief out of a hip pocket to wipe his eyes and say, "Pardon me! I don't know why I'm telling you this, unless it's because you're a receptacle for trouble."

Then there's a woman, a prominent member of some church, who grasps our hand, saying, "I thank you for that message. I am passing through deep trouble and I needed just that. You will remember me, won't you?"

The mail brings a letter, saying, "Thank you so much for your sweet letters. They strengthen me so much in my loneliness."

The Salvation Army would like all contributions sent to Allan Forbes, treasurer, president State Street Trust Company, during the days November 1 to 11.

FAMILY SET CRAZY BY TYRANT MOTHER

By Winifred Black.

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

SHE'S little and wistful.

She cries easily and every once in a while she sighs.

She wears lavender and old rose and gray—and she carries a parasol and has real lace on her handkerchiefs—and there's a little fragrance about her of lavender or something delicate like that.

She must have been a beauty once, in a saucy, roughish sort of way.

An Incorrigible Flirt

She flirts with her son.

Making a fuss over her, writing her letters for her, putting her hair up in a new "do," trying on hats for her, furnishing up old breakfast jackets to look like new, and listening to Mama complain about Son and telling how utterly selfish he is since he met that girl from the South and thinks he's fallen in love with her.

Son not only thinks he's in love with the girl from the South—he knows he is, and everyone who has seen them together thinks that the girl from the South is in love with Son. But Mother won't hear of it.

She hates the girl from the South. She says she's heartless and selfish and scheming, and if Son should marry her she'd lie right down and die—so there. Son ought to marry a different type altogether—not slender and delicate and blue-eyed. Nonsense! What Son needs is a little, rosy girl like a peach just ripe, someone full of fun and life and gaiety.

But those of us who can look back a year or so remember that when Son did pay attention to just exactly that sort of girl, Mother was even more horrified than she is now.

And she broke off the match, everyone knows that. She used to brag about it, though now she says that she never heard of such a thing.

And the little Southern girl—she's going back home next week. I don't think she's very happy—and Son looks as if he's lost the last friend he had in the world.

Just as She Is

I wish son and the girl from the South would step over to the church around the corner and be married and go away on a wedding trip. And when they come back, make a bee-line right straight across the city from Mama.

For Mama is a selfish, exacting, vain old tyrant—and that's all she is, to tell the plain truth about it. She wants Son herself, and she doesn't care whether he's happy or not. And anyhow, how can he help being happy with such a dear darling, sweet, devoted Mama to make love to, day in and day out?

Go to the divorce courts and listen to the mother-in-law testimony for just one day—and you'll make up your mind as to that.

Poor, silly little, vain little, selfish little Mama! Wouldn't it be terrible if she should look in the glass some morning and see herself, not as she thinks she is—not as she'd like to be—but as she really and truly is!

CRUCIFIXION OF RUSSIA PROBABLY SAVED US

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

WHETHER we like it or not, we are deeply indebted to the Bolsheviki.

By this time, the drift of tendency over there is readily discernible. With Lenine himself frankly admitting the necessity for at least a temporary recognition of the capitalists' regime, it must be evident—to even the most enthusiastic devotees of communism—that the doom has been sounded for the establishment of the kingdom of heaven on earth by this particular revolution!

But it must be noted, and generously admitted, that something akin to this, if translatable into materially practicable terms, was the genuine purpose of the revolutionaries.

With our American spirit of fair play, and with our traditional and really deep-seated sympathy with the spirit of revolution in general, we shall not be so little-hearted and ungracious as to refuse to recognize the essential ideality of that struggle.

You may recall, in this connection, an illuminating—if pathetic incident at the time of the Spanish-American War. Admiral Sampson at Santiago harbor had smoked out Admiral Cervera and his Spanish squadron.

At Santiago

It was not a naval battle, but a slaughter—as, at the best, all war must be! All around were the disabled ships of the defeated, momentary, enemy. On the decks and in the water were strewn the dying and the struggling Spanish sailors.

Our intrepid Yankee fighters sent forth an impromptu shout of victory, which Admiral Phillip, their captain, promptly checked with the restraining order: "Don't cheer, boys, the poor devils are dying!"

That is the spirit we like to recognize as typically American generosity.

The war, blockade, famine, and the asinine folly of attempting to establish an ideal by force—and on such a colossal scale!—have co-operated to assure the failure of socialism as a national principle and policy.

It would not be difficult to realize that the process of democratic evolution must be slow; as slow as the gradual growth of the people in the proven capacity for self-direction—political, economic, intellectual, and religious!

Only so far and so fast as the average of us has become religiously, intellectually, economically, and politically democratic—that is, capable of self-direction—can America, and every other nation, undertake the social changes which shall register such growth of the people.

Foredoomed to Failure

They serve as a psychometer, indicating the level which the human spirit has actually reached—not merely in Russia but in the race.

For one thing, it registers the fact that men the world over—and even in Russia—believe in Property as intimately bound up with the Individual, his worth, his integrity and the just return for his efforts.

The Russian Revolution has made it unnecessary for the rest of mankind to try to find out whether we have outgrown our interest in property—or capitalism, as it is commonly called.

This revolution plainly proves that humanity has not become so otherworldly as really to wish to abolish private property, or so unselfish as to substitute altruism for individualism as the motive of social activity.

We should thank Russia for making the experiment. We should reverence her for undergoing the vicarious crucifixion, which has probably prevented universal social revolt!
